THINK FINANCE DEFENDANTS' RESPONSE TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 26 and 33, Defendants Think Finance Inc., TC Loan Service, LLC, Tailwind Marketing, LLC, TC Decision Sciences, LLC, and Financial U, LLC ("Defendants") object and respond to Plaintiff Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Office of Attorney General's ("Plaintiff") First Set of Interrogatories ("Interrogatories") as follows.

These responses are based on information available and analysis completed as of the date of this response. Further discovery, independent investigation, and analysis may lead to additional information that may add meaning to known facts, as well as establish new factual conclusions and legal contentions, all of which may lead to additions to, changes to, or variations from the information set forth herein. Accordingly, Defendants reserve the right to alter, amend, or supplement its responses as necessary. Defendants also reserve the right to amend their responses for inadvertent errors, mistakes, or admissions. In responding to all or

Loans originated by First Bank of Delaware: $203,504

Loans originated by Plain Green: $1,744,788

Loans originated by Great Plains: $513,699

Lines of credit extended by MobiLoans: $351,859

INTERROGATORY No. 3

For all ThinkCash installment loans made to Pennsylvania borrowers, provide the following information:

- (a) Loans originated, in dollars,
- (b) Numbers of loans originated,
- (c) Numbers of unique borrowers,
- (d) The average Annual Percentage Rate charged,
- (e) Amount of dollars still outstanding (regardless of identity of the current creditor), broken down into current, past due less than 61 days, and past due more than 60 days,
- (f) Amount of dollars collected to date from the borrowers, broken down by principal, interest and fees,
- (g) Total dollar amount of debt that was sold or transferred, broken down by Debt Buyer,
- (h) Total dollar amount of judgments obtained by Debt Buyers, broken down by Debt Buyer (regardless of the name of the judgment creditor).

RESPONSE:

Subject to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above and the specific objections set forth herein, Defendants respond as follows:

(a) The total principal of ThinkCash installment loans lent by the First Bank of Delaware in Pennsylvania during the Relevant Time Period was $23,912,900.

- (b) The First Bank of Delaware originated 48,327 ThinkCash installment loans in Pennsylvania during the Relevant Time Period.
- (c) Defendants do not know the exact number of unique borrowers of installment loans originated by the First Bank of Delaware in the Relevant Time Period. Approximately 33,310 of the ThinkCash installment loans during this time were coded "new" First Bank of Delaware customers as opposed to "former."
- (d) Defendants object to this subpart on the grounds that it requests information not maintained in the usual course of business.
- (e) Defendants object to this subpart on the grounds that the term "outstanding" is vague and ambiguous. Notwithstanding this objection, none of the principal lent to Pennsylvania borrowers for ThinkCash installment loans originated by the First Bank of Delaware is outstanding.
- (f) The total amount of dollars collected to date from Pennsylvania borrowers for ThinkCash installment loans originated by the First Bank of Delaware in the Relevant Time Period is $19,202,086 (principal), $18,140,682 (interest), and $392,577 (fees). These amounts do not reflect Defendants' income.
- (g) Defendants object to this subpart on the grounds that it seeks information not within the custody and control of Defendants. Notwithstanding this objection, the First Bank of Delaware sold approximately $2,903,100 in ThinkCash installment loans that it had originated.
 - (h) Defendants are without knowledge about the information requested in subpart (h).

INTERROGATORY No. 4

For each of the tree Tribal Products, provide the following information regarding loans or cash advances made to Pennsylvania borrowers:

- (a) Loans originated or cash advanced, in dollars,
- (b) Numbers of loans or cash advances originated,
- (c) Numbers of unique borrowers,
- (d) The average Annual Percentage Rate (APR) charged, and, for each year during the Relevant Time Period, the number of loans that ever had an APR of (i) 60% or less, (ii) between 60% and 80%, or (iii) between 80% and 100%.
- (e) Amount of dollars still outstanding (regardless of identity of the current creditor), broken down into current, past due less than 61 days, and past due more than 60 days,
- (f) Amount of dollars collected to date from the borrowers, broken down by principal, interest and fees.
- (g) Total dollar amount of debt that was sold or transferred, broken down by Debt Buyer,
- (h) Total dollar amount of judgments obtained by Debt Buyers, broken down by Debt Buyer (regardless of the name of the judgment creditor).

RESPONSE:

Subject to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above and the specific objections set forth herein, Defendants respond as follows:

(a) Plain Green – The total principal of loans lent by Plain Green in Pennsylvania during the Relevant Time Period was $69,552,250.

Great Plains – The total principal of loans lent by Great Plains in Pennsylvania during the Relevant Time Period was $14,394,800.

MobiLoans – The total amount of extensions of lines of credit by MobiLoans in Pennsylvania during the Relevant Time Period was $25,101,953.

(b) Plain Green originated 76,278 loans in Pennsylvania during the Relevant Time Period; Great Plains originated at 23,646 loans in Pennsylvania during the Relevant Time Period; MobiLoans extended 25,324 lines of credit in Pennsylvania during the Relevant Time Period.

(c) Plain Green – Defendants do not know the exact number of unique borrowers of loans originated by Plain Green in the Relevant Time Period. Approximately 34,799 of the loans during this time were coded "new" Plain Green customers as opposed to "former."

Great Plains – Defendants do not know the exact number of unique borrowers of loans originated by Great Plains in the Relevant Time Period. Approximately 12,009 of the loans during this time were coded "new" Great Plains customers as opposed to "former."

MobiLoans – Defendants do not know the exact number of unique lines of credit extended by MobiLoans in the Relevant Time Period. Approximately 16,689 of the lines of credit extended during this time were coded "new" MobiLoans customers as opposed to "former."

- (d) Plain Green/Great Plains/MobiLoans Defendants object to this subpart on the grounds that it requests information not maintained in the usual course of business.
- (e) Defendants object to this subpart on the grounds that the term "outstanding" is vague and ambiguous. Notwithstanding this objection, none of the principal lent to Pennsylvania borrowers for loans originated by Plain Green or Great Plains, or for extensions of lines of credit by MobiLoans is believed to be outstanding.

(f) Plain Green – The total amount of dollars collected to date from Pennsylvania borrowers for loans originated by Plain Green in the Relevant Time Period is $53,491,230 (principal), $69,202,553 (interest), and $620,178 (fees).

Great Plains – The total amount of dollars collected to date from Pennsylvania borrowers for loans originated by Great Plains in the Relevant Time Period is $10,242,138 (principal), $15,556,193 (interest), and $179,412 (fees).

MobiLoans – The total amount of dollars collected to date from Pennsylvania borrowers from extensions of lines of credit by MobiLoans in the Relevant Time Period is $19,395,176 (principal), $23,757,643 (fees). Since MobiLoans offered lines of credit, there were no "interest" fees accumulated; the comparable information for the offered lines of credit is contained in the "fees" amount.

- (g) Defendants object to this subpart on the grounds that it seeks information not within the custody and control of Defendants. Notwithstanding this objection, Plain Green sold approximately $1,744,788 in loans that it had originated; Great Plains sold approximately $513,699 in loans that it had originated; and MobiLoans sold approximately $351,839 in loans that it had originated.
 - (h) Defendants are without knowledge about the information requested in subpart (h).

INTERROGATORY No. 5

Describe the role of any members of the Chippewa Cree Tribe (including with that description, the identity of such members, the geographical location of such person while performing that role, the source of this information and the identity of the persons at Think during the Relevant Time Period and were responsible for servicing consumer loans originated by Plain Green or Great Plains, or the lines of credit extended by MobiLoans. Defendants entered into a "License and Support Agreement" with each of the Tribal lenders detailing the licensing of consumer lending software. Per the agreements, the loan management platforms were fully accessible by certain Think Finance personnel; when questions arose from the Tribal lenders or investors regarding specific information, Think Finance personnel would transfer data from the loan management platforms via encrypted emails, secure FTP, or via the lender portal website.

The system servers for the loan management platforms were located at Rackspace (Chicago, Illinois); SunGard (Richardson, Texas); CyrusOne (Carrollton, Texas); and the Think Finance offices (Fort Worth, Texas; systems did not actively run from here, there were only copies of the data). From Think Finance, Larry Brandt likely would be most knowledgeable about the information in this Interrogatory.

Defendants are also in the process of preparing an additional document for an upcoming production that will be responsive to this Interrogatory. Upon production, the document will be marked TF-PA-623514.

INTERROGATORY No. 13

Provide the following information regarding customer-service personnel answering phone calls from or initiating phone calls to current or prospective installment-loan or line-of- credit customers of either of the Tribal Products, as of (i) July 1, 2011, (ii) January 1, 2012, (iii) January 1, 2013, (iv) January 1, 2014, (v) January 1, 2015: (a) the Tribal Product worked on, (b) the location of the call-center sites where they worked; (c) the number of such individuals at each of the locations; and (d) the employer(s) of such individuals.

RESPONSE:

In addition to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above, Defendants object to this Interrogatory on the grounds it is not limited to information relevant to a party's claims or defenses in this case and requests information not proportional to the needs of the case. Defendants also object to this Interrogatory to the extent it seeks information more readily obtained from other parties, specifically Plain Green, LLC, Great Plains Lending, LLC, and MobiLoans, LLC. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing specific and General Objections, Defendants respond as follows:

As described in Interrogatories 5, 6, and 7, each Tribal lender was responsible for, and had final authority over, the entirety of origination of consumer loans and extensions of lines of credit, including decisions regarding staffing of customer-service personnel. Defendants did not maintain comprehensive information about the customer-service personnel of each of the Tribal lending entities. Defendants, however, did maintain a running list of individuals who worked for Plain Green, LLC, Great Plains Lending, LLC, and MobiLoans, LLC to the best of their knowledge. A copy of this list, including job title and location where known, is attached as Attachment A.

Responding further, each Tribal lending entity contracted with firms that provided call center services as needed. Although Defendants did not maintain a comprehensive list of all entities that may have contracted with the Tribal lenders, the following organizations are believed to have provided customer-service support for each Tribal lending entity as detailed below.

MetaSource, LLC – provided call center services for Great Plains since July 2011, for Plain Green since April 2011, and for MobiLoans since July 2013.

First Contact, LLC (d/b/a iQor) – provided call center services for Great Plains since July 2013, for Plain Green since August 2013, and for MobiLoans since August 2013.

KM2 Solutions, LLC – provided call center services for Great Plains from July 2011 to February 2013 and for Plain Green from July 2012 to June 2014.

TeleVista, Inc. – provided call center services for Plain Green from July 2012 to June 2014 and for MobiLoans from April 2013 to June 2014.

First Center, LLC (d/b/a Capital Management Services) – provided call center services for MobiLoans from June 2012 to September 2013.

INTERROGATORY No. 14

With regard to your plans in 2012 to conduct an IPO for Think Finance (referenced, for example, in Document TF-PA 310635 (at page 310640)), explain the reasons that the IPO did not take place and that the company, instead, created Elevate Credit, Inc. as a separate company. Include in the explanation, an identification of all documents and analyses related to the decision whether to conduct an IPO for Think Finance.

RESPONSE:

In addition to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above, Defendants object to this Interrogatory on the grounds it is not limited to information relevant to a party's claims or defenses in this case and requests information not proportional to the needs of the case. Further, Defendants object to this Interrogatory on the ground that it seeks information protected by the attorney-client privilege.

INTERROGATORY No. 15

Identify each person (a) who served on the Think Finance board of directors during the Relevant Period (including the dates they served and any organizational affiliation), (b) on the initial board of directors of Elevate Credit, Inc., and (c) on the current board of directors of Elevate Credit, Inc.

RESPONSE:

In addition to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above, Defendants object to subparts (b) and (c) of this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is not limited to information relevant to a party's claims or defenses in this case, requests information not proportional to the needs of the case, and requests information more appropriately addressed to a third party. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing specific and General Objections, Defendants respond as follows:

(a) The following persons have served on the Think Finance board of directors during the Relevant Time Period:

Name	Dates Served (during Relevant Time Period – 1/1/09-present)	Organizational Affiliation
Kenneth E. Rees	1/1/09-5/15/15	Think Finance

INTERROGATORY No. 16

Describe each of the customer acquisition channels referenced in TF-PA-041497 and 43836 (DM, LG, Affiliate, SEM, Organic, Digital), including in each description, (a) an explanation in lay terms describing how customers are routed to Think Finance products; (b) the costs associated with the channel, including the point at which the cost is incurred; (c) an identification of any business relationships regarding such channels and (d) identification of any contracts related to such business relationships.

RESPONSE:

In addition to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above, Defendants object to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is not limited to information relevant to a party's claims or defenses in this case and requests information not proportional to the needs of the case. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing specific and General Objections, Defendants respond as follows:

The different customer acquisition channels referenced in TF-PA-041497 and -043836 are described below in turn:

"DM" – Direct Marketing: this channel includes direct mailing of offers to apply for loans originated by Plain Green or Great Plains, or for an extension of line of credit from MobiLoans. Think Finance prepares marketing materials and sends the materials to the Tribal lenders for review and approval. After approval from the Tribal lenders, the Direct Marketing materials are mailed to potential consumers. These Direct Marketing materials provide potential consumers with either pre-qualified offers or invitations to apply for loans or extensions of credit directly on the Tribal lenders' websites. The costs associated with the Direct Marketing channel include acquisition of potential consumer data from credit bureaus (cost incurred after final list of data approved), printing of mailing materials (cost invoiced after completion), postage (cost invoiced after completion), and logistics of the printing process (cost invoiced after completion). The Direct Marketing channel involves business relationships with credit bureaus that provide data, TransUnion, LLC, Clarity Services, Inc., printing houses that print and manage mailing logistics including Direct Marketing Solutions, Inc., and other providers of potential consumer data including Altair Data Resources, Inc. and O2 Consulting, Inc. The Direct Marketing channel relevant business relationship agreement with Direct Marketing Solutions, Inc. has been produced as TF-PA-618884.

"LG" – Lead Generator: this channel included agreements between Lead Generator entities (third party websites) and Tribal lenders to supply potential consumer leads. The Lead Generator channel directed potential consumers to Tribal lender websites using prerequisites and rules based on answers provided via loan applications completed on a given Lead Generator website. The Lead Generator channel costs included a pre-set amount per lead that the Tribal lender ultimately accepted; this cost was invoiced in bulk at the end of each monthly billing cycle to the Tribal lender. The Lead Generator channel involved business relationships between the Tribal lenders and AmOne Corp., Partner Weekly, LLC, Affiliate ROI, LLC, Credit Loan, LLC, KGM Direct, LLC, Zoom Marketing, Inc., Apex 1 Lead Generators, Inc., Ccnet, AtomicLeads.com, StoreFront Lenders, LLC, and Commission Junction, Inc.

"Affiliate" – this channel is similar to the Lead Generator channel and consisted of third party websites that pre-negotiated terms with the Tribal lenders to generate potential consumer leads. The Affiliate channel directed potential consumers to Tribal lender websites via banner ads or text links on the Affiliate website; unlike the Lead Generator channel, there was no loan application data passed from the Affiliate regarding the potential consumer. The Affiliate channel costs included a pre-set amount per lead that the Tribal lender ultimately accepted; this cost was invoiced in bulk at the end of each monthly billing cycle to the Tribal lender. The Affiliate channel involved business relationships between the Tribal lenders and AmOne Corp., Partner Weekly, LLC, Affiliate ROI, LLC, Credit Loan, LLC, KGM Direct, LLC, Zoom Marketing, Inc., Apex 1 Lead Generators, Inc., Ccnet, AtomicLeads.com, StoreFront Lenders, LLC, and Commission Junction, Inc.

"SEM" – Search Engine Marketing: this channel includes ads that appear alongside standard search results when an internet user is using a search engine. The Search Engine Marketing channel directs potential consumers to Tribal lender websites when a potential consumer clicks on the ad link in the search engine results. The Search Engine Marketing channel costs include a pre-set amount per click of the Tribal lender ad on the search engine. The cost is incurred instantly, and is invoiced on a monthly basis. The Search Engine Marketing channel involves business relationships with Google, Inc. (results shown on search engine), Bing (results shown on search engine), and Camelot Communications, LTD (an agency that manages bidding on specific keywords for search results). There are no contracts with particular search engines or agencies; payments to the search engines and agencies are based on actual usage.

"Organic" – this channel includes natural links to and traffic to lender websites. The Organic channel directs potential consumers to Tribal lender websites from various free website traffic hits and free search engine hits. There are no costs associated with the Organic channel. The Organic channel involves no consistent business relationships. On occasion, there have been third party technical consultants, like Vertical Nerve, Inc., used to help recommend better website coding. There are no contracts related to the Organic channel.

"Digital" – this channel includes other digital advertising methods such as banner ads aimed to attract clicks to Tribal lender websites. The Digital channel directs potential consumers to Tribal lender websites via clicking on banner ads from various third party websites; unlike the Affiliate channel, the agreements to place the ads come from a separate ad platform. The Digital channel costs include a pre-set, pay-per-click arrangement, and these costs are agreed to through specific insertion orders to different ad platforms. The Digital channel involves business relationships with Google, Inc, DoubleClick, Rocketfuel, and ClearHead Group, LLC (digital ad platforms). There are no contracts related to the Digital channel; these relationships are driven on specific orders.

INTERROGATORY No. 17

State the book value of the investment fund known as GPL Servicing Ltd. ("GPLS") as of the following dates: July 1, 2011; December 31, 2012; December 31, 2013; December 31, 2014, and, as of those same dates, identify all investors by dollar amount and percentage, and describe any liquidity restrictions, guaranteed returns, and any differences in the rights of classes of investors.

RESPONSE:

In addition to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above, Defendants object to this Interrogatory on the grounds that "book value" is vague and ambiguous and is susceptible to multiple meanings. Defendants will need clarification on its intended meaning before being able to respond to this Interrogatory with accurate information. Defendants also object to this Interrogatory's request that Defendants "identify all investors . . ." on the grounds that it is not limited to information relevant to any party's claims or defenses in this case and requests information not proportional to the needs of the case. In addition, Defendants do not have the information necessary to respond to the questions about the specific investors in GPLS and their respective percentages of investments.

INTERROGATORY No. 18

For each state ever classified as "No State" on the loan platform for any of the Tribal Products, or, which was ever removed from the No State list, provide the following information for each Tribal Product: (a) the date that state was added to or removed from the "No State" list; (b) the reasons for the decision not to do business or the decision to resume doing business in that state; (c) identification of any documents pertaining to that decision and (d) identification of any persons participating in the decision.

RESPONSE:

In addition to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above, Defendants object to subparts (b), (c), and (d) of this Interrogatory on the grounds that Plain Green, Great Plains, and MobiLoans are a better source for this information and the individuals most knowledgeable about this subject work (or have worked) for these entities and not Defendants. Defendants, however, did maintain a list of States where the Tribal lending entities did not offer loans on an annual basis since 2013, which is offered below in response to subpart (a). Subject to and without waiving the foregoing specific and General Objections, Defendants respond as follows:

(a) Plain Green – The following states were included on the "No State" list for Plain Green LLC at the dates noted:

As of June 15, 2016: Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Vermont, West Virginia

2013: All states between August 22, 2013 and October 1, 2013 as well as Arkansas (April 5 – October 1, 2013) California (January 29 – February 22, 2013), Connecticut (January 29 – April 5, 2013), Georgia (January 29 – October 1, 2013), Illinois (April 5 – October 1, 2013), Louisiana (January 29 – February 22, 2013), Maryland (April 5 – October 1, 2013), Minnesota (April 5 – October 1, 2013), Missouri (April 5 – October 1, 2013), New York (April 5 – October 1, 2013), North Dakota (January 29 – April 5, 2013)

Great Plains – The following states were included on the "No State" list for Great Plains Lending LLC at the dates noted:

As of June 15, 2016: Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, West Virginia

2015: Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, West Virginia

2014: Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Oklahoma, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota (as of June 13, 2014), New Hampshire (as of June 13, 2014), New York, Pennsylvania (as of November 26, 2014), Vermont (as of June 13, 2014), West Virginia (as of June 13, 2014)

2013: Maryland and all states between August 22, 2013 and October 1, 2013, after which consumer loans were extended in all states except for Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Oklahoma, Maine, Maryland, New York

MobiLoans – The following states were included on the "No State" list for MobiLoans LLC at the dates noted:

As of June 15, 2016: Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, West Virginia

2015: Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut (as of January 7, 20 15), Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, West Virginia

2014: Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts (April2, 2014), Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania (as of November 25, 2014), Vermont (June 13, 2014), West Virginia

2013: All states between August 22, 2013 and October 1, 2013, after which consumer loans were extended in all states except for Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, West Virginia

INTERROGATORY No.19

During the Relevant Period, identify which of the following persons or entities have held stock in or made loans to Think Finance, Inc., and for each, state (i) the applicable period of time, (ii) the amount of shares owned or loans made, and (iii) the amount of outstanding shares or loan balances currently: (a) Victory Park (b) Alonzo Primus, (c) Steven Haynes or Haynes Investments, (d) Ken Rees, (e) Jason Harvison or other members of the Harvison family, (f) Chris Lutes, (g) Robert L. Johnson, (h) Princeton Alternative Funding or Fintech Financial, LLC, (i) Brett Horrocks, or (j) Mark Curry.

RESPONSE:

In addition to and without waiving the General Objections set forth above, Defendants object to this Interrogatory on the grounds that it is not limited to information relevant to a party's claims or defenses in this case and requests information not proportional to the needs of the case. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing specific and General Objections, Defendants respond as follows:

- (a) Victory Park none.
- (b) Alonzo Primus none.
- (c) Steven Haynes / Haynes Investments none.

- 1 her when we're all talking over one another, which 2 I'm as guilty as anybody of. So we also have to do 3 our best to try to wait until whoever is talking is 4 finished before we proceed with my question or your 5 answer. Do you understand?

 - Q. Okay. See, that was -- see, it's a trick question.

So the -- and the result of what happens here is that there is this transcript, and the transcript could conceivably be used in further proceedings in this case. Do you understand that?

- Q. Okay. And you're under oath. The oath that you just got -- that you just took is -- means that what happens here is the equivalent of you testifying in a federal courtroom. Do you understand?
- 19 A. Yes.

Q. Okay. If you don't understand the question, it's perfectly fine to ask for clarification. It would be helpful if there's something in the question that you don't understand, to tell me what about the question you didn't understand. I'll try to do a better job. If you mentioned that you've been deposed before.

- A. Uh-huh (affirmative response).
- Q. Can you let -- let us know -- and I don't
- 4 really care about your personal life, if there have 5 been car accidents or bike accidents, or things like
- 6 that. But just with regard to your professional
- 7 life, what -- have some of those depositions been
- 8 with regard to the business side of your life?
 - A. Yes.
- 10 Q. Okay.
- 11 A. One was related to the CFBS CID into Think 12 Finance, and the other was related to a -- a lawsuit 13 related to a board member of ours. So I was a 14 witness in that lawsuit. And potentially one 15 related to employment law. I'm not sure if that 16 really happened.
 - Q. Now, the lawsuit, was that the Steve Schafer lawsuit?
- 19 A. Yes.
 - Q. What was that lawsuit about?
- 21 A. There was a dispute over compensation
- 22 between Steve and the -- the company that he was
- 23 formerly a part of. And he -- we had attempted to
- 24 do a business deal with him, and for one reason or
 - another, I was a witness in that.

don't know the answer, "I don't know" is perfectly

2 fine as well. 3 Now, your lawyer will, undoubtedly, be 4 objecting for a good part of today. But as I'm sure 5 he's told you, unless he specifically directs you 6 not to answer, you still have to answer the

- question. That's one difference between a deposition and the courtroom, there's no judge here to rule on objections. So unless he tells you not
- 10 to answer, you still have to answer the question, 11 notwithstanding whatever -- there may be objections
- 12 all up the table, you still have to answer the
- 13 question. Do you understand that? 14
 - A. Yes.
 - Q. Okay. We will take many breaks. If you need a break outside of when the lawyers call a halt, just let us know. I would only ask you to finish whatever question was pending at the time, and then we can break and you can go out.
 - Lastly, is there any reason, illness, hearing disorder, medication, lack of sleep, concussion, anything like that, why you can't give this deposition your full attention today?
- 24 A. No.
 - Q. Okay. So the first question is, you

Q. I see. But you weren't adverse to Steven

- 2 Schafer?
 - A. No, not at all.
 - Q. He's still -- he's still on your board,
- 5 right?
 - A. Yeah.
- 7 Q. Okay. And the CFPB CID investigation, when 8 were you deposed in that, how long ago?
- 9 A. I don't know the year. It was -- I'd be 10 guessing.
- 11 Q. And after the deposition, did you get a 12 chance to review the transcript to make sure your --13 that they accurately transcribed your answers to the 14 questions?
 - A. I did not review the transcript.
- 16 Q. Did -- so did you ever see a transcript?
 - A. It was available to me, but I didn't -- I
- 18 had other people review it.
 - Q. Meaning your lawyers?
 - A. Uh-huh (affirmative response).
- 21 Q. Okay. Do you have that with you today?
 - A. No.
- 23 Q. Okay. Did -- and you didn't -- you've
- 24 never reviewed that transcript?
 - A. I don't believe so.

MR. ACKELSBERG: Richard, I just -just for the record, I mean, just we mentioned this during the Harvison deposition, we would like copies of the depositions.

MR. SCHEFF: And if my recollection is correct, I think that we've not been supplied with an official transcript by the CFPB. We created our own. And I think the CFPB regulations prevent us from turning it over. I'll review those, as we said we would. I always thought and, you know, I'll ask you, as part of the MOU, as part of the cooperation that you've had with the CFPB, I assumed you have the transcripts of Harvison and Rees.

MR. ACKELSBERG: All right. Well, we'll talk about it.

MR. SCHEFF: Okay. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

- Q. I want to just go over your very impressive resumé just a little bit. I note that you graduated Reed College in mathematics. Is that right?
- A. That's right.
- Q. And the University of Chicago MBA program; is that right?
 - A. Yes.

there was a couple of companies in a row, including the one that I started in Dallas called CashWorks where I -- we helped consumers cash their checks in convenience stores and grocery stores and put the proceeds on -- on prepaid debit cards so they would be safer for the customer. That company was bought

Then after that -- that company was sold, I was looking for what to do next. And one of the board members of that company, CashWorks, had started up a company called PayDay One. It was the company that ultimately became Think Finance. And --

O. Would that be Mr. Stinson?

A. That was Mr. Stinson, that's right.

And he had gotten the company to -- to profitability. It was in growth mode, trying to decide whether he wanted to sell the company or continue to grow it. He was an older Fort Worth businessman, didn't think that he wanted to personally run it. Thought I was a decent CEO and -- and asked if I would first step in as the president under him, and then, eventually, he sort of stepped off and asked if I would take over as CEO and chairman of the board.

Q. So I have to ask you this, just out of curiosity, how did a graduate of one of the country's most prestigious liberal arts colleges and MBA programs end up as an online subprime lender? MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Well, actually, I can walk you through my, sort of, career. After business school, I became a management consultant working with -- first it was Booz Allen Hamilton, then -- then CSC. I did a lot of work in financial services, including work for Wells Fargo.

And, actually, the thing that got me started on this was some work I did in the Wells Fargo branches where we were doing some branch productivity work, and the staff kept talking about lobby trash and how we need to get rid of the lobby trash. And I realized it wasn't trash, it was the people cashing checks that were underserved by

And it sort of signaled to me that there was a vast unmet need for financial services that banks were backing away from. I was intrigued with the idea of how technology could serve that.

So that's what led me first to the world of -- of sort of online check cashing, which we -- Page 16

- Q. Well, let me go back just a little bit to the period at Wells Fargo. What time period were you there?
 - A. So I was a management consultant from -- I graduated business school in 1990. So I would have been a management consultant until about '98. '97, '98. Then started a -- or didn't start, joined a business -- and that's actually where I met Mike Stinson. He was the one who had started this.
 - Q. That's the CashWorks, or is that --
 - A. It's actually a precursor to CashWorks. It was originally called Mr. Payroll when I -- when I joined, and then it was renamed InnoVentry. And it was -- ended up being a joint venture between Wells Fargo and CashWorks, kind of a strange joint venture between a bank and a -- and a pawnshop. But with the idea of using, again, technology and things like facial biometrics to better serve an underserved customer.
 - Q. How does -- what does facial biometrics have to do with check cashing? I'm just curious.
 - A. You have these sort of souped up ATMs in grocery stores, and so the facial biometrics is a way to identify the customer and to prevent fraud.
 - Q. When you were a management consultant at

4 (Pages 13 to 16)

Page 17 Page 19 1 Wells, what --1 A. Yeah, Mr. Payroll was --2 A. And just to be clear, I was a management 2 Q. -- tried but failed? 3 consultant with -- with CSC and was doing a project 3 A. Yeah, that was check cashing in, 4 4 essentially, souped up ATMs. The problem with that for Wells Fargo. 5 5 Q. I see. So your employer was CSC, but for product was the ATMs were very expensive on both to 6 6 those roughly eight years, the project was at Wells buy -- they were $60,000 devices -- and then very 7 7 high servicing costs. So the business model just 8 8 didn't ultimately work. A. No. To be clear, I did many projects. The 9 project that really made me think about the needs of 9 CashWorks was really serving the same 10 underserved Americans for financial services was 10 customer need of check cashing customers that wanted the convenience of being in -- in grocery stores and 11 some work I did for Wells Fargo. And I did --11 12 12 Q. And what specifically was that work that retailers as opposed to going to an establishment 13 13 you were doing for Wells Fargo? with brick and mortar and bullet proof glass and 14 A. It was a -- the project that I was 14 things like that. 15 15 referring to was a branch productivity project, how The difference is we used point-of-sale 16 to be able to serve more customers in the branches 16 terminals. So it was a lower cost. And we funded 17 with -- with lower costs. I did a number of 17 onto prepaid debit cards, so it was more -- safer 18 projects for Wells Fargo, though, over the years. 18 for consumers. They didn't walk away from the 19 19 establishment with a bunch of cash in their hands, But they were not my only client at -- at CSC. I 20 had clients including Citibank in Singapore, 20 they had the plastic. 21 chemical plants in Korea, and power plants in 21 Q. So they would come in with, like, a 22 22 paycheck, and they would walk out with a prepaid Canada. 23 23 So it was pretty wide ranging, but -- but debit card? 24 as I said, the -- you asked specifically how did I 24 A. Right. 25 get into this space. It was some work I did as a 25 Q. Okay. Now, the company that went -- let's Page 18 Page 20 1 consultant working for Wells Fargo bank that -- that 1 move to PayDay One. And you began there in what 2 2 really sent me down this path and gave me a sort of year? 3 3 lifelong passion about serving underserved A. 2004. 4 4 Q. And you joined as CEO? consumers. A. No, I joined as president. The company had 5 5 Q. So when you -- now, Mr. Stinson was the 6 6 owner of both CashWorks and PayDay One? been started in 2001. I was asked to join in 2004. 7 A. No, sorry, the -- a little bit confusing. 7 I worked for Mike as the president, and he was the 8 When I left management consulting, it was to join a 8 CEO and chairman of the board. 9 9 company that Mike had started, Mike Stinson had Q. And when was it that -- that PayDay One 10 10 started called Mr. Payroll. I was the COO of that changed its name? 11 company. That company ultimately failed, and I 11 A. I don't remember the exact year. I 12 started up a company called CashWorks. 12 would -- it was in the range of 2006 to 2008. 13 Q. So that -- you started it? 13 Q. So, roughly, the time that the -- that the 14 A. I started that. Mike was on -- I asked 14 venture with First Bank of Delaware was happening, 15 Mike to be on my board of that company. I -- I 15 right? 16 16 thought he was a very good businessman. And then, MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. 17 17 as I said, after I sold CashWorks, then Mike, who BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 18 18 Q. So, roughly, that same time period? had started up another business called PayDay One at 19 19 MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. the time, asked me if I would join PayDay One. 20 Q. All right. So the -- you mentioned a 20 A. I'm just trying to remember what the timing 21 little bit about CashWorks, that it had to do with 21 was. I -- I think that's correct. 22 check cashing and retail establishments, right? 22 BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 23 23 A. Right. Q. Yeah. And so the product, the installment 24 24 Q. And Mr. Payroll, what was that? What was loan product was called Think Finance, right? 25 25 the service that Mr. Payroll --And -- you've got to answer the question.

5 (Pages 17 to 20)

MR. SCHEFF: He wasn't sure whether you were finished with your question. So is there --

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. The name of the product -- this is -- this is a question. The name of the -- it's called leading questions. So sometimes it may not sound like a question, but I -- it is intended as a question.

So the name of the product was Think -- ThinkCash, correct?

A. The name of the product was ThinkCash. The reason for the -- for the change in the name of the business was it -- when the company was started by Mike Stinson, it was an online payday loan company. It was actually a discounted payday loan using technology, but it was clearly indicated by the name this was a payday loan product. We had some concerns with that name, so we were -- we were already anticipating a different name change. But Think -- ThinkCash was the product name and the company name, but it was really the signal that this was not a company that was about payday loans; this was a company about providing access to credit in a variety of different ways.

after I got on board and we started doing more focus groups with customers.

But -- but to your -- to your exact point, yes, the idea of ThinkCash was to move away from the idea of it being a payday loan company and it being a financial services company serving nonprime customers.

Q. Then at some point, I believe -- well, I think -- I think it was Chris Lutes who told us this, but let me ask you: There was a point where the venture capital came in and enabled you to pay off Stinson and the early -- the early investors; is that right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. You can answer the question.

A. So when I came on board, I thought it was important to have a more professional equity sponsorship for the company. The company was cash flow positive at the time. Typically, when venture capitalists put in their money, it goes to fund operations. In this case, when they put in their money, it was primarily to -- to pay the founders of the company, Stinson and Harvison. But they -- they didn't cashout, by any stretch of the imagination, but the funds that came in were really used to buy

Q. And at that point the name changed, there -- there, basically, were two products, it was PayDay One and ThinkCash, right?

A. Right.

Q. Okay. And the ThinkCash product felt, in your mind, as sort of closer to the direction you wanted to take the company at that point; am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. You can answer.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. As opposed to traditional payday loans?
MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Yeah, we -- we felt that there was -- and we were learning more about the customer needs, and what was interesting to us customers were looking to be able to repay their loans over longer periods of time than a traditional payday loan, which is a very short-term payment.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Usually it's two-weeks, right?

A. Usually -- yeah, on the next paycheck, right. So we -- we were anticipating moving into right. So we -- we were anticipating moving into other forms of credit, installment loans, lines of credit were all sort of anticipated pretty early parts of the ownership of Stinson and 7HBF.BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. 7HBF being the Harvison family fund, right?

That's correct.

Q. So when you arrived at PayDay One, was -- was Jason Harvison already -- already there?

A. He was.

Q. Okay. And what was his job there when you arrived?

A. I actually don't know exactly what he was working on. There was only about 20 people when I joined, and oftentimes people had a number of hats. But he was someone who impressed me as a -- as a talented young guy, and it ended up being something he took on a number of roles within the company from compliance roles to operations to product leadership.

Q. I've read some things that you've written talking about the path from startup to -- to a public company, which is, obviously, a very impressive path. What -- in your -- in your own mind, how long did the startup -- the startup phase last? What was the -- I mean, I assume when you were at 20 people there, that it's still in startup mode. At what point, in your mind, was it something

A. I don't mean to be, you know, flippant in the response, but I -- I feel in many ways the company is still a startup. We still are constantly reevaluating. When I think about what a startup does, it's trying lots of things. It's focused on growth. It's looking for -- for new opportunities. And that's something that's been actually fairly consistent in the company.

So it's been a company that I -- I find is interesting in just how much innovation it's been sort of doing from the history of the company, whether even before me it was the first one to use technology to have a fully automated loan transaction in this space. They had already done a -- a licensing deal with a third-party bank before I came on board. We expanded that.

And so it's been sort of a constant history, I think, of -- of being willing to grow and try and advance. And so I don't know in my mind that there is a change between startup and stable because it has seemed to be that -- that type of a high growth, high innovation business from -- from very early on before I joined.

Q. Which was the -- I'm forgetting. What was

- was about a year after I joined. I think Mike was sort of comfortable with my management style and thought that I could lead the company that he had --
- 4 he had established and, you know, had, justifiably, 5 a lot of pride and personal ownership in.
- 6 Q. And what about -- at some point, you became 7 chairman of the board as well, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did that happen? Could that have been when the venture capital came in, like, roughly when -- when Stinson was -- the Stinson debt and the Harvison debt was paid off or. . .

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

14 A. I just don't know exactly when that was. 15

I'm sorry.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 16 17

Q. But by the time you were entering into the deal with First Bank of Delaware in 2007, you were also chairman of the board at that point, right?

A. By 2007, I would have been chairman of the board. I don't know, for instance, whether I was when we got TC funding. I just don't remember that.

Q. Okay. Now, what about -- do you have any professional -- are there any professional organizations you're -- you're involved in?

the bank arrangement before First Bank of Delaware? A. It was before my time. It was a bank, I believe, called First Bank of Las Vegas, strangely not -- not in Las Vegas, you know, in New Mexico.

Q. Well, that's all right. First Bank of Delaware wasn't much in Delaware either.

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form to the extent that's a question.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Go ahead. So. . .

A. And, yeah, there was a -- I don't know much about the -- the transaction because before -- it was before my time, but it was a -- a partnership with a bank to license them technology to serve the, you know, customers with credit.

Q. Also payday loans were at that time?

A. Again, I don't know for a fact whether it was payday loans or installment loans. It was one of those two. I don't think it was a line of credit product.

Q. Okay. So at what point did you become CEO of the company that eventually was called Think

A. Yeah, I think it was about a year after I joined. I don't know the exact date, but I think it Page 28

1 A. I'm on the board of the Online Lenders 2

Association, and I think that's -- that's about it.

Q. And how long have you been associated with the online lenders -- is it the association or alliance?

A. I think it is the Online Lenders Alliance. Thank you.

Q. Okay.

A. I don't know exactly when I joined. I think we were asked to join, I'm going to guess, it was probably '07, '08. I can't remember exactly

Q. And how long have you been on the board?

14 A. It would have been since we joined as a 15 member.

O. And what's the -- what's the mission of OLA?

A. It's a trade organization for online lenders to help them under- -- help both promulgate best practices as well as for government affairs activities.

Q. And are they all -- strike that.

23 All right. How would you describe your 24 leadership style?

MR. SCHEFF: You're talking about

Kenneth Rees Page 31 Page 29 1 during the Think Finance period, I presume? Because 1 with a little bit. But I'm just curious, this --2 I don't know whether it's changed and who knows. 2 this 3 billion figure, like, where did that come 3 BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 3 from? 4 4 Q. Yeah, that's fine. We can -- during your MR. SCHEFF: Let's -- we're not 5 years --5 talking about Elevate, so let's move on. We're not 6 6 MR. SCHEFF: Confine your answers to talking about Elevate's business. So let's move and 15 15 would you describe your leadership style? just focus on Think Finance. 16 A. I have been asked that before, and I always 16 BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 17 struggle to give an answer for it. I've never been 17 Q. So you -- I mean, I think I saw that in --18 able to articulate that. I mean, I think what do 18 that figure $3 billion saved, I mean, there are 19 19 I -- what drives me as a leader is about -- we have documents to that from the Think period as well. 20 our -- our four values, and I think four values in a 20 That's not a new concept savings, is it? 21 company ultimately come from what the CEO thinks. 21 MR. SCHEFF: Mr. Rees, confine your 22 22 answer to Think Finance, please. Thank you. So we've always said that we want to think 23 23 big. So I like innovation, and I want sort of MR. ACKELSBERG: What? I'm just 24 people who work for me to be driving for -- for new 24 curious, what --25 things and trying new things. Sort of raise the 25 MR. SCHEFF: Because this case isn't Page 30 Page 32 bar. So I want to see people work on incrementally 1 about Elevate. And, again, if you want to go talk 1 2 2 improving all aspects of the business. to Judge Joiner about that, I'm happy to do that, 3 Win together. So we feel very -- very 3 but we're not talking about Elevate. If you want to 4 4 strongly about the lack of functional hier- -- of talk about the spinoff, we're -- I think that's fair 5 barriers and the lack of hierarchy in the company. 5 game. But we're not talking about Elevate's present 6 6 One of the reasons why, for instance, you know, as business. We're talking about Think Finance. 7 part of my leadership style I don't just look to the 7 That's what your lawsuit is about, and so that's 8 people below me. I do like to listen pretty broadly what's going on in the company at all levels.

And I think do the right thing is the other thing that's part of the -- the -- are the values of the company I feel very strongly about. I want to see a high level of ethics. It's something -- you know, I've been proud of the company. I think we have -- you know, instead of the -- you know, the old line payday loans, we have moved away from that. We have saved customers, you know, our products, $3 billion over the -- and this is for the -- for the Elevate world.

But have really sort of held ourselves to trying to do things in a better way. So I don't know if that fully answers your question, but I think values of the company are a reflection of the leader of the company.

Q. And I do want to -- I want to follow up

8 what you need to focus on.

9 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

10 Q. Mr. Rees, when you were at -- I mean, these 11 values that you told us about, the four values, 12 those are values that you had when you were at Think 13 Finance, right? Can you -- right?

A. Actually, that number wasn't used, but we were through -- through the, really, latter part of the Think period that I was there, we were really focused on this idea of how much we saved customers over payday loans.

Q. And how do you make that calculation? Whether it's 3 billion that you're quoting at Elevate or some other number that you quoted earlier, what -- how do you come up with that number?

A. So the -- we used the CFPB's assessment of what the average effective APR of a payday loan was and then looked at the products that were originated either directly by us or by partners using our technology platform. Looked at the difference between the effective APR of those products and the effective APR of payday loans, and that's how we calculated them.

Q. And then just multiply that times the loan volume?

A. Exactly.

down hierarchy is to be able to listen to challenges as well as to do a good job of communicating what we are trying to achieve as a company.

Q. The title, which -- the title of the article which refers to, I guess, a comment you made in the -- in the interview itself about trying to become more a bus driver than a bulldozer. I take it that there's -- that sometimes just from that -from that description, that you've had a hard time sort of not getting too involved in the details and trying to look more in the big picture. Is that -is that what you're trying to communicate with this bulldozer and bus driver idea?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question.

A. You know, working for a CEO that doesn't focus on building the team is ultimately, you know, super frustrating for people. And I have evolved as a CEO. I think early days, I was more -- I didn't listen as much to my team, and it's something that I have worked on a lot. I've had coaches that have worked on this with me. And it's -- that's been sort of the theme of trying to be a better leader is to balance, you know, making sure people understand what we are trying to do but also doing a better job this as Plaintiff's Exhibit 272.

(Exhibit No. 272 marked.)

A. Okay.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. All right. So my first question is just, how in the world did you manage to get the New York Times to interview you about your management style?

A. We had a PR team that we were working with, and they were, obviously, looking for coverage of the company and me as the leader and were able to secure this.

Q. So, you know, there's reference to -- you know, and this follows up for some of the things you just told us about -- about trying to diminish hierarchy a little bit within the -- within the culture of the company, right? And this "Cookies With Ken," did that -- did that -- something like that happen throughout your years with Think?

A. Absolutely, yes.

Q. And the quarterly town hall meetings?

A. Yes. 21

22 Q. And the -- so the idea was to really 23 inspire people and to -- but to also be accessible 24 to your -- to your employees? 25

A. Yeah, I mean, think the point of breaking

1 of listening and delegating and letting people run 2 their pieces of the business.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. What about -- how would you -- we have been talking about your management style, your leadership style. But what would you describe as the core responsibilities of the CEO, at least -- and I'm not asking for a business school answer. I'm asking for just you, Ken Rees, within the Think -- Think Finance period, what did -- just in terms of your work there, what were your core responsibilities?

A. I mean, I think, ultimately, the CEO is responsible for building a team that can -- can deliver the -- the growth and objectives of the business, getting that team to jointly agree on a direction and work effectively towards -- towards achieving that direction.

So that's where, I think, that the bus dozer -- excuse me -- the bus driver comes into place, that that's -- that's -- I think the number one job of any CEO is making sure you've got the right people on the bus, that everybody understands their -- their role, and working together, they can achieve the business objectives of the business.

Q. Now, usually a bus driver is driving

A. Well, I mean, certainly the CEO plays a very big role in -- in establishing the direction of the company. But I think, you know, for a company to align on a vision, it has to be a vision that's been -- that a lot of people feel like they have helped to build, and there's -- there's full commitment to it.

And, again, I mean, that's sort of the theme of the -- of this bus driver. I think the best CEOs are ones who -- who are not coming down from the mountain with tablets saying, "Here's the answer," but working with the team to jointly get the best ideas and -- and align on -- on a vision for the company in a direction that makes sense.

Because it doesn't make -- you know, you rarely get the results you want if -- if one person is saying we've got to do X but everyone else thinks we've go to do Y. I mean, I have never worked with people that just blindly do what I want, as much as I may like that. It is really about coming up with seasoned business people, and, ultimately, the CEO does report to the board. So it's -- it's communicating and adapting as -- as need be as well.

Q. And there are also -- the CEO also has -and, again, I'm not talking -- talking generalities.

6 I'm talking Ken Rees as the CEO. 7

A. Right.

Q. That you also have a primary responsibility -- an important responsibility with regard to not only talking to board members but talking to investors, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. You can answer the question.

A. Yeah, I mean, I think it's probably pretty obvious. You've undoubtedly looked at the board memos I write. I think it's important to be highly transparent with the board in all things that are working well, as well as things that aren't working well, and engage them in both understanding, you know -- you know, how the company is working as -as well as sort of where we're -- where we're headed and what the overall strategy is. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And with regard to communications with -with investors as opposed to board members, that a -- a joint vision that people are really passionate about.

Q. Well, once the -- once the team has -- once there's consensus on what that -- what that direction is, what the strategy is, then the CEO has certain -- has a certain role in terms of taking that into the world, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. That's right. Yes, the CEO should be working with his team to make sure that -- that we're doing the best job we can moving towards that -- that vision.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And particularly with regard to relations with the board and communicating that -- that vision to the board and making sure the board is aligned with that vision -- with that vision, that's -that's certainly a CEO responsibility, would you agree?

A. Yes.

Q. As well as --

A. Although, I would say, obviously, listening

23 to the board as well.

Q. Oh, sure.

A. Because the board, you know, are very

Page 40

1 too, is -- the CEO has a role in that; am I right? 2 MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question.

A. Specifically, I'm -- so, specifically, I guess I want to -- so all of the investors in the company were either on the board, except for the 7HBF and Stinson who were not on the board. I did do a fair amount of separate interactions with Mike Stinson as the founder to help him understand and talk to him about the business. I really didn't spend any time updating 7HBF, even though they were a meaningful investor.

So I just wanted to highlight, I really spent my time with the board and the -- because the board really represented the investors as well. I didn't -- I wouldn't say I felt that my role was -was communicating to all of the investors. It was really to the board, and then I also spent some time with Mike just because I thought he was a good sounding board for ideas.

A. I'll answer the question, but just vis-a-vis this specific chart, this isn't -- my recollection is this isn't entirely accurate. Q. And subprime bureau data?

A. I don't think we were using that for direct

Q. Okay. So why don't -- can you explain the difference between a prime bureau and a subprime bureau?

A. Yeah, so there's -- the way we categorize them, the three -- big three bureaus: Experian,

Page 107

1 A. I don't -- I don't know -- I knew it was 2 related to a --

Q. Or Selling Source?

A. I remember it was related to Selling Source. I didn't know what relationship Tucker had 6 to either of those businesses.

> Q. Okay. And then the one that was puzzling to me was social media and how social media and -and I've actually read some articles where you even described this. So if you could just briefly explain how -- what was unique about Think Finance's use of social media?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. I think the witness testified that they weren't using social media in '13.

MR. ACKELSBERG: No, no, you misheard. That was with regard to collections.

MR. SCHEFF: I may have.

MR. ACKELSBERG: Yeah.

21 Q. So now we'll answer the question.

> A. You're correct, this is -- as I said, on --I don't -- I can't -- I don't know what was the intent of this. It's not quite accurate. The -- in Equifax and Trans Union, are primarily serving prime customers, and they're the traditional sources of, like, you know -- that's what goes into a FICO score and things like that.

The subprime bureaus, in our minds, were -- and I think all these were in existence back then: Clarity, MicroBilt, Teletrack. There's FactorTrust. There might have been a couple others. Ones that had very limited data on just sort of targeted niches in the -- in the credit provision.

So Teletrack, as an example, got most of its data from brick-and-mortar payday lenders. They didn't have anything that -- that banks originate. Clarity had some bank transactions but were primarily online lending based.

Q. And what about MicroBilt?

A. I don't know what was unique about MicroBilt. I just remember they were also, in our minds, subprime, sort of more nichey provider of credit information.

Q. And there was another one called DataX. Do you remember that one?

A. DataX, yes. I had forgotten about them. Thank you.

Q. That was Mr. Tucker's company, right?

looking for was whether the customer had a social

4 media footprint, did they have a LinkedIn account, a

5 Facebook account. If they didn't have any social 6 media footprint, that raised a flag, and that was a

7 potential fraud indicator. But that's the only

Q. All right. So, basically, just generally what we're talking about is purchasing data from -from a variety of third-party sources to make decisions, either with regard to who the company is going to approach as a potential customer, or as you -- as you move across this grid, how the decision engine is going to actually work and making the decision whether to lend or not. Am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question.

A. Yeah, just specifically, so, of course, as you probably know, my recollection is the data that was bought was bought by the lender, typically. So in some cases, the data was actually purchased by whether -- if it's a bank, the bank would have been

- Q. We cited a -- forgetting offhand the -whether it was an article or a company -- a company blog, but something coming from you in the years prior to the -- to the litigation where you reference state laws being Byzantine. Do you remember that -- that reference?
 - A. I did make a reference to that.
- Q. Okay. When you described in media state reaction to tribal -- the tribal lending model as being Byzantine, what did you mean by that?
- A. I don't know that I can speak to exactly what I meant. It's -- that was a -- in fact, I don't even know the context for when that was -that was originally said. It's been, I think, taken out of context a number of times. But I can't speak to exactly what I was referring to.
- Q. Well, I guess that's why I was -- when I asked you whether there was some frustration with state regulatory response to tribal lending, I wasn't talking specifically about document P-274. I

- O. I understand.
- A. -- something about it, but that's about it.
- 3 Q. Well, I mean, you're not an attorney. I'm 4 certainly not asking for anything you're getting 5 from attorneys. But you're also, you know, a very 6 smart guy who pays attention to a lot of stuff, 7 like, for example, the Colorado and California cases 8 that you mentioned. Those are cases that you 9 studied, right, before you decided to take the 10 company down this path? Am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

- A. I -- I read those before, as a company, we ultimately decided to move down that path, yes. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- Q. And you're also familiar in litigation around the country, whether in the bank context or the tribal context, that the argument has been made saving that whatever tribes have -- well, let me just -- let me just sort of paraphrase the argument. So -- and just ask if you're familiar with this argument.

That whatever it is that the tribes have the ability to do, if somebody else is really doing it in the tribe's name, that's different, that that's -- that other person might actually be the

was really just -- just interpreting what you were saying and the Byzantine reference, that there was some frustration that the states were not fully appreciating what Think Finance was trying to do?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. A. I guess I wouldn't really speak to frustration. That's a nature of serving this customer. I mean, we are serving a customer that, although they are two-thirds of the U.S., still wasn't particularly well-known by policymakers. Their needs for credit, the real-world alternatives they have are not particularly well-known. I think it's just sort of a statement of fact.

And, again, you know, in here I was trying to -- and, again, I don't know exactly what the purpose of this was, but it -- to me it seems to be just trying to sort of recite the realities of -of, you know, the business that we were in. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

- Q. Now, one of -- you're familiar with an argument called "true lender," right?
- A. I have -- have heard of that. I believe it's a not particularly well-defined largely legal fiction. That's -- you know, I'm not an attorney. I know -- lender using the tribe as a cover for doing what they can't do directly. That's -- that's the argument that -- you understand that's the true lender argument, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

To the extent you can answer that question without disclosing communications you've had with counsel, please do so. If not, just tell us.

A. And you're asking my opinion. As I said, in my awareness of that -- we stipulated that I'm not an attorney -- I have read certain cases. What is striking to me, and why I do refer to the legal fiction, is -- and I actually said this to the CFPB -- is that the -- there seems to be different definitions. Different judges have ruled in different ways.

There doesn't seem to be any understanding of what this term actually means and whether it has any real legal background. That's from my limited under- -- you know, reading of the various rules that have happened and how judges seem to rule both ways, some throwing out the whole concept saying, oh, if a -- if a bank originated that loan, a bank originated that loan; others who -- who take this concept and rule in different ways around it. So I don't know what it means other than it has been a claim made by certain people who are trying to, you know, have a lawsuit against some sort of lending

3

5 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well --

A. I'm -- hopefully I answered that appropriately.

Q. But it's a debate -- it's a debate, as you said, that you've been aware of?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And, in fact, there have been -during your time as CEO at Think Finance, there, in fact, were executive discussions about trying to mitigate true lender risk. You remember those discussions, don't you?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

To the extent you can answer that question without disclosing communications with counsel, please do so. If you can't, let us know.

MR. SHELDON: And by communications with counsel, to be clear, that means both outside counsel at all firms, like Mr. Scheff, but also in-house counsel like Ms. Cutrona and others who are employed as attorneys who you have worked with.

Page 127 purpose without having counsel involved in that.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Do you remember -- do you remember the ongoing project called "tribalization" or "tribal restructure"? Do you remember that as a -- as a subject of executive attention during this period of time?

A. Yeah, we had -- I heard some ongoing evolution, if you will, of the -- of the tribal relationship and the tribal contractual relationship that we broadly based referred to as that.

Q. And you remember the discussions that -where you were trying to improve the optics of the way that -- the way those relationships appear?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question.

A. Should I -- are you wanting do I -- do I remember or -- I'm trying to think if there was conversations that would have been without counsel, and I don't know that there would have been.

THE WITNESS: So I -- I -- can I say --

MR. SCHEFF: If -- let's talk outside.
MR. SHELDON: Off record for a second.
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We are off the

A. It's pretty -- pretty hard for me to answer something like this without referring to my communications with in-house or outside counsel. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well, yeah, and I'm not -- I'm certainly not asking about that. I'm asking in your communications, say, with Jason Harvison in structuring -- structuring the loans, structuring the programs, the relationships with the tribes, do you remember discussions about mitigating true lender risk?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. Same instruction.

MR. SHELDON: And I'll just say again, even if someone like Mr. Harvison was in the room, if Ms. Cutrona or legal counsel were also in the room and providing legal advice, then we would ask you not to answer. And if you have any questions about whether or not you can answer, we are happy to step outside in the hall and discuss this briefly and then come back in. Do you understand?

THE WITNESS: I do. Thank you.

A. I don't think I would have been talking to Jason or anybody else about, you know, anything in regard to structuring a legal agreement for this Page 128

5 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. So before we broke, Mr. Rees, I was asking you about executive discussions about improving the optics in the relationship with the tribes, and then you said you wanted to talk with counsel. Can you answer the question now?

A. Yeah, so what I can't directly refer to is sort of the -- any legal strategies in terms of how that the tribal contracts and relationships were -- were evolved. I'm not aware of any -- any communications that happened where either in-house counsel or outhouse counsel wasn't there.

However, the overall, what we would consider strengthening of the programs by really working with the tribes to help build up their staff and to be ready to support what was a relatively fast-growing business, that would have happened with, say, Michelle and Jason without Sarah in the room. So the operational improvements, absolutely, would have happened, and I do remember those.

MR. SHELDON: And by Sarah, just to

But in -- and in the discussions with the operational staff, with Michelle and Jason, for example, that you do remember that -- that the -that with regard to the things that you mentioned, as examples, getting up staff and getting them -building up competencies at the tribal level, that, in part, this was to improve the optics, right? You remember that -- you remember that term being used, don't you?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Well, as -- as I've said, the primary driver of the work that was done by Michelle and Jason with the tribes to continue to expand their capabilities is support the rapid growth of business. The primary thing was to support the fact that these were rapidly growing businesses. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

 - A. Yeah, and I -- the only reason I -- at some point in time I believe that -- that the Legacy program for some of the tribal products was shifted to another platform provider.
 - O. Well --
 - A. So I don't mean to be overcomplicated here, but, generally speaking, though, when we launched the tribal programs, those -- the installment loan programs, they were on the Legacy platform. That's probably what you're looking for.

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

17 A. There wasn't a technology marketing 18 platform, per se, but the channels that were used 19 were consistent, although somewhat different,

- Q. But you wouldn't be talking about an IPO at a town meeting, would you?
- A. We -- we might. And, I'm sorry, I said town hall. I meant to say the quarterly business reviews. Quarterly business reviews were typically the -- the VP -- or directors and above in the company, maybe 50 people. And we would have discussed things, like, our plans for going public and what we thought needed to happen in order to have a successful IPO at some point in time.
- Q. Now, at some point, you were talking to investment bankers about the possibility of going public, right?
- A. Yes.

Q. And would you need to -- would -- forget about need. Q. Mr. Rees, I want to move to the decision of the company to pursue possible tribal partnerships and the -- the origins of those three contracts. And before I do, there's a number of people that appear in the documents sort of connected to either the decision to do tribal or one of the particular tribal relationships. And I am going to go through just a couple of names and ask you, one, how you first connected to that person, and, two, what role, if any, they played in the development of either Think's decision to go tribal or to -- in one of the particular relationships.

Okay. So the first name is a name that we mentioned before, and that's Steve Haynes. How did you first connect with Steven Haynes?

- A. I actually don't know. I met him once at an admiral's club in an airport for about 15 minutes. I think that's the only time I met him. After all of this discussion, I should know all the interrelationships, but I can't remember who first contacted him or how we got in touch with him as a
- Q. And you do know that there was some role that he played with regard to the funding of -- of Plain Green loans, correct?

You can answer the question.

A. Much of the material would be things we would discuss with an investment banker. But the fact that it says "Critical to achieve sexy spin on risk management capabilities" makes me think we probably didn't present this to a -- to an

7 investment banker.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

- Q. Right. So this -- this was probably meant for internal purposes, and then it would be -- it would be tweaked if -- if it were then turned into a production for a potential backer?
- A. I don't know about tweaked, but it does seem like this is for internal purposes of some sort. I agree with that.

16 MR. ACKELSBERG: All right. What time 17 are we at?

18 MR. SHELDON: 27.

in a way that we didn't. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And through who did you learn about Haynes' ability to do that?

A. I don't know. He came -- he -- I -- like I said, I met him, I think, once. Maybe there was another time. I'm not aware of any other time. And I really literally can't remember how we came into contact with him.

Q. Okay. What about Alonzo Primus?

A. Oh, Alonzo. Yeah, he ran First Bank of Delaware. I had actually known him as we were evaluating, you know, banking relationships. I mentioned we had the banking relationship before I joined the company, and there was a period of time where a lot of, you know, bank FinTech partnerships

A. So I'll walk through the history as I remember it. We were notified by FBD that they were going to be terminating the program. The program was representing a very significant part of the revenue and net income of the business.

We assembled the executive team together that weekend to look at a wide variety of things to do. Continued to grow the -- the existing nonbank product, adding new ones. We looked at opportunities in the UK. We looked at new product opportunities even outside of credit. And sort of moved down a path of -- and including a tribal lend, which is something we hadn't really evaluated in the past. So we took all of those potential business opportunities, began looking into them.

We actually ended up doing all of those things. You know, we bought a company in the UK. We launched a prepaid debit card. We launched a rent-to-own product. We enhanced the direct consumer product to grow that more aggressively. And then -- but as we were evaluating all the alternatives -- I'm sorry if I'm doing too much here --

Q. That's okay.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Now, the first -- my understanding is the first potential partner that the company talked to was Butch Webb in South Dakota. Right?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did that meeting come to be?

12 A. Actually, our -- the founder of the > company, Mike Stinson, had known another gentleman named John Templer, who had known Butch Webb. And when -- I -- I know that was the connection. I

16 don't know exactly how it was sort of connected up 17 that Butch Webb was involved in a tribal lending 18 organization. I don't remember that.

But one thing led to another, and we -- we traveled up to North Dakota -- North or South Dakota. I think it was North Dakota -- to meet with 22 him. We ultimately couldn't get comfortable with

23 his -- his business model. It seemed to run

24 contrary to what -- you know, what we and outside 25 counsel thought was the legally justifiable lending

what you're looking for.

We looked at -- at sort of other tribal lending businesses. There was a couple of court cases at the time that had just been decided in favor of the tribes, one in California and one in Colorado -- I don't know the -- you know, what names those were -- that seemed to specify what it would take for a tribal lending entity to have sovereign immunity and to not be, you know, subject to state law as per the tribal sovereignty would be.

We looked at other programs that were out there. And then based on that, then based on -really, you know, based on sort of the evaluation of that by all the parties, including the board, we decided that it made sense to move forward with seeing if we could come up with a suitable tribal relationship where we would provide technology and services to them, very similar to the way we had provided technology and services to the bank.

Q. And at that point in time, were other of your peer organizations -- well, let's say within -within the OLA, other than Mark Curry, were there other peer members of OLA that were doing business under the tribal model?

structures and --

MR. SCHEFF: Stay away from whatever counsel told you.

THE WITNESS: Sorry.

A. But in -- in any event, we -- I mean, did not like the fact that there didn't seem to be an arm of the tribe in any way involved with the -with the lending operation. So it was -- he was not very happy about it, but -- but we told him we weren't going to do business with him.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Now, did Claudia Callaway play a role in that connection?

14 MR. SCHEFF: Just answer the question 15 "yes" or "no."

A. I just don't know.

17 BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 18

Q. Do you -- do you remember if she was representing Butch Webb back at that time?

A. Don't know.

21 Q. Or CashCall or. . .

A. I don't know.

A. I don't know which entity it was. It was -- it was one that Mark Curry was associated with. I don't know if it was The MacFarlane Group or anyone else. But -- but there was a business entity that we were to be contracting with as opposed to directly with the tribal lending entity, and we didn't think that was a smart way to do business. And the --

O. Why not --

MR. SCHEFF: Let him finish the answer, please.

A. You know, we -- we felt we had a business model that, you know, A, it worked well. It had had FDIC -- in our minds at least, an FDIC sort of stamp of approval on it because it had gone through FDIC examination. We wanted to replicate that as much as possible. And having another entity where also we didn't feel like we'd be working directly with that -- that, you know, tribal lending entity, it just didn't feel like the right relation- -- I mean,

Q. Okay. Instead, there was a -- there was a switch to a different tribe, the Chippewa Cree in Montana, correct?

Q. Okay. So what do you remember -- well, first of all, what went wrong with the Otoe-Missouria and Mark Curry, or whoever you were talking with back then, or whoever --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- the company was talking with?

A. You know, the difference between the preliminary sort of deal terms that seemed to make sense and the final paperwork, we just weren't really happy with what we were seeing. At a high

21 level, we thought that the -- we believed that the 22 way that we worked with the bank, which we felt was

23 very stable and a well-functioning structure, was 24 such that we had really -- you know, we were the

25 service provider for the bank, and there weren't Page 184

we already walked away from the Butch Webb operation because we didn't think that was an appropriate way -- you know, we didn't think there was -- they 3 had any sovereign rights to lend at all.

And this, we just thought, was not the kind of business relationship that would be a stable, longstanding one that we wanted to be part of. So we had been continuing to talk to other tribes.

And as you mentioned, I think it was Haynes that bound the -- the -- what became the Plain Green tribe, the Chippewa Cree tribe, and we were sort of in parallel talking with those two -two tribes. And, ultimately, we were more comfortable with the structure and the relationship with the Chippewa Cree than we were with the since that time.

A. Alonzo and Harry Madonna, the chairmen. And they -- I'm sorry, I just lost my train of thought. Excuse me.

Yeah, so back to the -- the sort of FDIC oversight. So you've probably seen that at one point in time the FDIC stopped the bank from some of its programs and thought that they exhibited rent-a-bin characteristics. Ours was excluded from that. And we did modify the structure of the relationship with the bank, sort of looking at -- at what the FDIC didn't like about the other transactions. That was actually largely what the bank asked us to do. And then -- and that's when we established the Universal Fund -- for instance. Yeah, Universal Fund --. And the FDIC did -- I think it was two more exams, at least one more exam

So I guess I'd be surprised if the FDIC was unaware of it because they used that same structure and the same -- some of the same investors, at least for the previous program as well 5 as for ours, but I don't know for a fact whether the 6 FDIC didn't know that.

> O. Okay. You do know that the government ultimately shutdown First Bank of Delaware, you do know that, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form; lack of foundation.

11 12 A. I will go ahead an answer the question. 13 They did shut it down, but, again, my

A. I don't know that that means they shut them down.

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form; lack of foundation.

So from our perspective, you know, the bank had been told this is how we think you ought to be working with service providers for credit programs. We made changes specifically based on bank guidance. And then the FDIC looked at it and continued that -- that business until the bank ultimately exited it.

So, again, from our perspective, the FDIC had looked at it and thought there was an appropriate relationship for a lender and a service provider to have. So that was -- that was our perspective and why we wanted to heed as close to that structure as possible when working with tribes.

Q. Based on your conversations with Alonzo Primus and Harry Madonna, did you have the impression that the FDIC had been informed by them that the invest- -- that the investors in the Universal Fund who was buying the participations were family and friends of the bank leadership?

A. The FDIC, my understanding -- and this is really coming from representations from Alonzo and others at -- at the bank, was pretty thorough in its evaluation of these programs, both the program with us and previous programs that the -- that the bank

I don't know anything other than the fact that they had a product that they -- that they told us that they were unhappy with.

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question.

A. I can say I didn't do that. And I can't remember now exactly what due diligence was done on that tribe. I can speak to the fact that as a team we got comfortable that they would be a good business partner, but I just can't speak to exactly what was done and how much detail was accomplished. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. To the extent the Chippewa Cree had any prior experience in a lending operation, that would have been with the service provider being a company called Encore, Encore Services, right?

A. I believe that's true; although, I don't know exactly what role Encore played in the previous lending business that the tribe had. I remember that name in association with the business but not what the role was 1 a -- as far as we knew, that was a former business 2 relationship. I think it had already ended by the 3 time that we had begun discussions with the tribe. 4 I'm not certain about that, but that was my 5 recollection.

Q. Hang on just for a second.

Now, at some point you learned that -sorry. At some point Think Finance learned that Encore was, in fact, getting a percentage of the take from the Plain Green product, right?

A. Yes.

12 Q. Okay.

- A. It's very frustrating.
- Q. Explain. Why was it so frustrating?
- A. We didn't think they had done any value in terms of helping the tribe establish a relationship with us, yet they were taking what we felt was, you know, economic benefits from the tribe and putting them into their own pocket for no value add.
 - Q. Well -- so make sure I understand this. So when you were talking -- let's switch tribes. When you were talking to the Otoe-Missouria, you knew that there was a nontribal, call it intermediary service provider, that -- that you were talking with about the possible relationship. You were talking 14 about their economic development on the reservation. 15 Neither of those things is true of Encore.

Q. Well -- okay. So --

17 18 A. So we just saw no value in what they were 19 doing. Whereas -- whereas, Mark Curry -- and we can 20 argue about, you know, exactly how much they got.

21 I'm not sure exactly I know what it was. But there

22 was real value add they provided to the tribe, and 23 they should have been compensated in some fashion

Q. Right, but just going back to this -- to this e-mail in this -- before you -- before you did change the rules so that you took more control over NCA's ability to resell the debt, millions of dollars of PayDay One, ThinkCash and tribal loans ended up in hands that you had not vetted?

Q. And do you remember that there were some issues about the fact that NCA was selling the debt to secondary purchasers?

MR. DAUGHERTY: Objection to form. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. You do remember that problem, right?

A. It was --

MR. DAUGHERTY: Same objection.

A. It was -- I mean, it's -- it's a very common thing that happens in the -- in the business. Typically, when debt buyers buy debt, if they can't collect on it, they will resell it later. We were pretty new to selling debt and didn't understand that this could happen. It was in their legal right to do under the contract, so we did change the contract to prevent any future reselling because -- BY MR, ACKELSBERG:

Q. Right.

A. -- we thought it was important to keep that -- you know, keep a close eye on any debt collection.

Q. No, and I saw that. But before you did

You can answer the question.

A. I mean, again, it's actually a pretty common thing. We were very unusual in not wanting that to happen. And also, as I said, I've got absolutely no reason to believe that there was anything inappropriate that was done with the paper because we would have -- oftentimes, you know, if there was any sort of collections problem, we would hear about it, and I don't remember hearing anything in particular with this.

But, certainly, you know, I didn't view this as a particularly professionally run company, and I wouldn't have wanted them to have any collections rights to any -- any loans that were originated using our platform.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And so you didn't know until today that millions of dollars of loans originated off your platform were, in fact, sold to this character that you thought -- that you thought should go to jail based on what you saw on the -- on the video?

- Q. All right. And then there's references to a variety of issues on the second page.
- A. I mean, it looks like that GPLS may, from time to time, purchase participations that sounds very comparable to the structure that -- that was used with the First Bank of Delaware.
- Q. And you see that in terms of the mechanics, that Haynes had to set up a fund with sufficient monies to fund a day's worth of loans? Do you see that?
 - A. I see it. This is new to me, but I see it.
- O. So this -- it sounds like before -- before Jason signed this, he didn't -- he didn't talk to you. Was he just off on his own?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. You can answer the question.

A. Well, we're talking about a lot of details here, and these would be details that I would expect the relationship manager and the person working on the products to figure out between all the parties. There were a lot of parties.

24 The tribe, we had -- it looks like -- it 25 looks like we had at least two sets of counsel Page 215

- the bank as well. So the basic structure would have
- been in place. I don't -- I don't remember sort of
- 3 stamping 4.5 as either the goal or the limit. It
 - was -- that would have been the range of things that
- 5 he was trying to achieve. 6
 - BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - O. Is the "he" Jason?
 - A. Yeah, Jason. It would have been, you know, the deal team, I recall, being Jason and Michelle. Probably Sarah would have been involved. I don't --I don't know. But, you know, these are people I worked with for quite a while, so I had a lot of trust in his ability to negotiate the best job they could.
 - Q. Am I right that the --
 - A. And, again, this is -- this is just the term sheet, not the final executed contract.
 - Q. Am I right that the higher the revenue share, the less money at the end of the day for Think Finance? Right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

- A. Higher the revenue share? That is true. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. Okay. And this revenue share of 4.5 percent, this was significantly less than the

Page 214

- 2 Capital, and, you know, I -- you know, there was
- 3 certainly aspects that I would have expected that we
- 4 would have driven, other aspects that we wouldn't
- 5 necessarily have, like, you know, the -- the - structure of these mechanics. I don't know whether
- 7 that came from us. It seems like it's something
 - more salient to a relationship between the Haynes
- 9 and the tribe than -- than us.
 - BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. What about the provision about revenue share? Do you see that, about the tribe getting a 4.5 percent revenue share, that's something that probably would have been driven by Think Finance rather than GPLS, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Objection; calls for speculation. You can answer the question if you

A. You know, going into the negotiation, you know, there was -- you know, how does -- you know, he had a fair amount of leverage in negotiating the deal as -- as the best he could. I mean, every negotiation has its own unique challenges. I knew

24 25 Obviously, that's the way it had worked with -- with that there was going to be a revenue share.

 - A. I don't remember what that -- what that was. From what I remember, the bank seemed -excuse me -- the tribe seemed to think this was a significantly better deal for them than they had gotten from Encore, but I -- I can't speak to the specifics of that deal either.
 - Q. And how do you remember that?
 - A. This was really as we learned that they had an unsuccessful lending product, they told us they were unhappy with the deal structure that had been done at the time. I -- I can't remember exactly what they didn't like about it, but they certainly felt that this was very -- and as, obviously, approved to be, a great boom to the, you know, economic development on the tribe and a lot of income that came to the tribe from this product.
 - Q. Now, in addition to the 4.5 percent offered to the tribe, there was an additional 1 percent offered to Haynes, right?
 - A. That's what it says here, yes.
- 23 Q. Well, do you remember that as part of the 24 Plain Green deal?
 - A. I don't.

So I think that is what this is all about. We had an ACH provider for Great Plains loan because the tribe had two service providers to them for their two different lending programs. MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Yes, we were both contributing to the trade organization, Native American Financial Services organization. There was legal expenses involved with doing business with the three tribal lending organizations as well as, you know, obviously, quite a -- quite a variety of consulting and contracting costs associated with bringing these products to life.

Some of these I don't know, but -- but generally speaking, yes, there's a lot of operating expense involved in the -- the -- and I don't know whether these are exclusive to -- to the tribal lending programs. It's not clear that they are. So I don't know how much is -- is, generally speaking, legal consulting and contracting for the company as a whole and how much was just for the tribal association -- or sorry -- tribal-related -- related business. But, you know, obviously, there was meaningful amounts of legal and consulting and

So 2013 was actually a year of tremendous amount of product innovation and launches. So I'm -- I would certainly not suggest that there wasn't a meaningful amount of expense related to the three tribal businesses, but we had an awful lot going on as a company. And so I can't speak to how much of this was related to, you know, the transition of the -- that the original product, the -- and then, of course, the expected spinoff of the business later, there's legal work related to

So this was a time of tremendous amount of activity as we launched three new products, were preparing to go public -- excuse me -- preparing to spin off, and then also thinking long-term about what the prospects of the company might be. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well, just going down the list, Patton Boggs, that was tribal model related, right?

MR. SHELDON: Let me insert an instruction and an objection here. So what I understand counsel is about to do is ask you questions regarding the legal services that the various law firms were providing here. That gets into a tricky area because in some of these answers

1 contractor expense for the company as a whole. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well, during this period of time, December 2012 to November 2013, other than -- other than the beginnings of the RISE product, the three live products were Plain Green, Great Plains Lending and Mobiloans; am I right?

8 MR. SHELDON: Object to the form. 9 MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form; 10 misstates the evidence.

You can answer the question.

A. Yeah, actually, in 20- -- by the end of 2013, we had -- boy, there was actually a fair amount that had -- that had gone on. You know, we had the press -- the product up and operational. I think that spendable product and all of the ongoing sort of negotiations of trying to expand that, I

18 think there was some period of time here we had 19 launched the Elastic product in 2013. We had

20 restructured PayDay One entirely to be RISE, and 21 there's a cost associated with that. You know, 22 legal consulting and contractor associated with

23 that. So -- oh, and then, of course, the UK, you

24 know, we bought that business in 2010 but we

25 relaunched the whole product in 2013. Page 236

1 you may be tempted to reveal, you know, 2 communications or details of what those legal 3 services are.

> I'll say for purposes of this line of questioning, I'm okay if you -- if you indicate whether these law firms, in general, provided legal services related to the tribal arrangements and if you indicate whether these law firms provided legal services other than in relation to tribal arrangements. If you feel you need to go into any more detail than that to answer any of his questions, I would ask you to indicate that, and we can step out in the hall and discuss that. Do you understand?

THE WITNESS: Okay. MR. SHELDON: Thank you. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. So Patton Boggs, that was related to tribal, right?

A. I think they were exclusively tribal.

Q. Okay. And, of course, the Native American Financial Services Association, that would be exclusively tribal, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And Victory Park management, that --

- O. That's the way that the economics were set up, right?
- A. The economics were as per the contract very clear that GPLS would pay that share and that we were providing a guarantee to -- to GPLS and we were getting a share of the upside for that -- for that loan portfolio. But I think it's pretty clear that we were not paying that to the tribe.
- Q. Oh, no, I understand that. And I'm -- I apologize for maybe my sloppy question. But for every dollar that was paid to the tribe by -- out of GPLS revenues, that was a dollar less that would go at the bottom of the waterfall to Think for the administrative fee?
- A. The terms of the deal were that --22 actually, let me see if I can remember. It's been a while now. So there was a waterfall of payments that came out of the GPLS fund, some to pay for -for the tribe's revenue share, some to pay for some

It does not say it was costing a million dollars a month. It says we're paying over a million dollars a month, and that's a really important distinction

MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. That's fine.

A. So, I mean,, I -- to -- we sort of -- when we had the previous discussion, even before I saw this, I suggested that there were, you know, costs related to legal expenses, costs related to the support of the Native American Financial Services Association and other sort of consulting costs related to -- to serving the tribal market. So there were true out-of-pocket expenses for us not related to the operation of any individual tribal

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

- Q. Okay. Do you remember the -- the litigation that the -- the Otoe-Missouria had with the State of New York?
 - A. Yes, I do.
- Q. And, in fact, your -- your chief integrity officer, Martin Wong, was part -- you know, part of his responsibilities was to work on that litigation; am I right?
 - A. He -- he coordinated with the counsel. I

1 tribal expenses, some to go to the investors, and 2 then sort of whatever was leftover would -- would 3 come to us per the guarantee.

Q. Right.

- A. So that's -- that's the structure of it.
- Q. So -- so I think you're agreeing with what I'm saying, but let me -- that under that structure, if you have to pay, you know, an extra dollar to the tribe, that's an extra dollar that's not going to be at the bottom of the waterfall, right?
- A. Since we weren't paying to the tribe, if GPLS had to pay those, that would mean there would be less excess cash flow for us as the administrative agent. But, I mean,, to be clear, we weren't paying those. That was not our responsibility. That was something that, you know, ultimately, GPLS and the -- and the tribe, you know, had as part of the participation agreement.
- Q. When you said to Mr. Curry in 2013 that -that the tribal model is costing Think Finance a million dollars a month, I mean,, are we looking at part of what that -- what was -- what was included in that $1 million a month?

MR. SHAPIRO: Object. You misread, I think in a significant way, what this document says.

think it was David Bernick who worked on that on behalf of the tribes.

Q. So that would be additional legal expenses that -- did that come out of -- who paid -- who paid those expenses? Was that -- was that Think Finance? Was that GPLS? Was that --

A. I think that was -- I think that was paid by the Native American Financial Services Association. I'm not sure about exactly how that was paid. We contributed to supporting that -- that legal process. So I don't --

Q. So it might have --

A. Actually, I don't -- I don't remember the timing of whether it was in 2013 or whatever the year is, but -- but in terms of -- it doesn't look like, and I don't remember this, that we were making any direct contributions to that. I think our contributions were to the trade association, and the trade association made the decision about how to spend those with regard to the -- to the lawsuit.

MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. Does anybody need a break? Are we okay? Or can we keep going, or what?

MR. SCHEFF: How do you feel? MR. ACKELSBERG: That's a -- that's a

A. Oh, you're absolutely right. Oh, gosh, I -- maybe it is later in the day. Right now, we were -- we had one bank partner. We were actively looking -- we had two bank partners, one where the revenue had obviously dropped off. It was super profitable, but we were trying to find another bank -- bank partner.

So I guess what I'm responding to is -- I don't think at this time we would have said we just have PayDay One and ThinkCash. I think we still thought that the Elastic product was going to continue, just with a different bank partner.

- Q. By the way, so just looking at the revenue performance, the first bullet under "August Performance," revenue -- I mean, we're largely talking about revenues generated by, at this point in time, PayDay One and ThinkCash?
- A. I think that's right. I just don't know how much revenue was still coming from the Elastic product. We weren't doing new customer acquisitions, but oftentimes, the earnings are highest when you're not doing new customer

- portfolio, we're talking about the performance of those loans, right?
 - A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, I do want to ask one question about the -- in the Elastic section on page 3, do you see in the -- in the second paragraph, it says, "We've been reviewing the customer profitability of the product and are pleased with the results. When we throw out monthly customers," then you say, "(we'll force biweekly/semimonthly payments for all customers) and look at the results of our champion strategy, the product is showing strong margins."

So my question is about -- about -- do you remember the decision to, basically, push all customers into an every two-week payment as opposed to a monthly payment?

A. I don't -- I don't know -- I don't remember that we actually did that. I do know we talked about it. The -- for one reason or another, monthly customers had much higher defaults than biweekly and semimonthly. I don't know if it was because of the type of customer who's paid on a monthly basis versus the type that has, you know, sort of biweekly, semimonthly payments. But I know there

- acquisitions.
 - Q. I understand, because you don't have --
 - A. Marketing costs.
- Q. -- you don't have the expense of trying to get those customers, right?
 - A. Yeah.
 - Q. Okay. Loans outstanding less than 61 days, this -- this would refer to the loans outstanding in the PayDay One and ThinkCash business primarily?
 - A. And the Elastic.
- 11 Q. All right. But -- okay. All three of 12 them, right?
 - A. Uh-huh (affirmative response).
 - Q. Okay. And then on the next page, you talk about -- page 2 of the report, there's references to the PayDay One portfolio and the Think- -- and then in the next section, the ThinkCash portfolio. And my understanding is, is that the -- the P&Ls would also be broken out by product type so you would actually be able to see how the -- the direct product PayDay One is operating how the installment loan product was operating, for example, right?
 - A. In the board dec it would have broken out the performance by product, yes.
 - Q. Okay. So when we think about the ThinkCash

Page 256

- 1 was a -- certainly a discussion at the time of 2 whether we just say the loan product requires either
- 3 a biweekly or semimonthly payment.
 - Q. Now, that wasn't -- that difference in behavior, that wasn't only with regard to the Elastic product, right? I mean,, you saw that -you saw that across all products? Let me ask you a different question.

Am I right that the way that the -- that the ThinkCash product with First Bank of Delaware was set up is that payments were made every two weeks?

- A. My recollection is payments were tied to -to when the customers paid. So it would have been at least biweekly and semimonthly payments. I thought the product also allowed customers to select a monthly, you know, payment structure. I'm not certain on that, but I -- I guess I would have thought they did.
- Q. There was a default, though, like, if the customer didn't -- didn't select something different, it would be every two weeks, right?
- A. Well -- and I can't speak to exactly how it worked, but my -- because we sort of changed how we determined that. You know, very early on, the

More recently, but I think it would have been at this time, we had the customer give the next few pay dates for them, and then we would associate the repayment schedule for that loan to match with their anticipated pay dates.
- Q. So that the ACH could be targeted for the date that they actually get their paycheck in their -- in their bank account, right?
- A. Assuming that the customer opted to pay by automated ACH, yes.
 - Q. Well, that was most customers?
- A. It was most customers. Customers had to -had to select that.

- A. And I know it goes without saying, but, you know, these were -- since these were products where we were the -- the technology and servicing provider, any -- any discussions or the sort of changes to the structure, and like we're talking about with Elastic, would have been done in concert with the -- with originator of the credit.
- Q. In the last section on page 4, talk about the plans for a -- I guess a branding or something

Do you see that?

A. So it does say that. I -- just to clarify, I don't know that we ever used "Banking for the rest of us" in any -- actually any public facing. I think it was just really, as I recall it, more of our internal thinking about how do we raise the visibility of these products as mainstream products. In retro- -- "Banking for the rest of us" is not a great logo. I don't know that we did much with

But, yes, we did as -- it says here, we thought it was important to distinguish our products from those sort of payday lenders, both in terms of the structure, the pricing and the fact that they don't help customers build credit. And then, secondarily, we were conscious of the fact that at some point in time, a liquidity event, like an IPO, would be a good thing for our investors.

- Q. But -- so when you started with the company in 2004, the main product was PayDay One, right?
- 21 A. The -- the product that was live at the 22 time was PayDay One. Actually, there was -- I think 23 there was a couple of other products.
- 24 Q. Like PayDay Select? PayDay Okay? 25
 - A. No, I think PayDay Okay was live when I called "Banking for the rest of us" that was a slogan that ran across all your products?

A. I don't know that it ran across our products, but I think we were becoming aware that the need that we were serving was very much a mainstream need. There was more awareness of the fact that -- pardon me for this -- but, you know, half of Americans have barely $400 in savings, two-thirds of Americans have a subprime credit

So this is very much a mainstream need. People didn't understand that it was a mainstream need and mainstream credit product. So that sort of "Banking for the rest of us," I don't know that we even specifically used those words, but that was the context of trying to raise visibility of the need for better forms of nonprime credit and how we were doing things that were helping mainstream consumers have access to credit that was better than other options available to them.

Q. And the last sentence suggests that this -this new banner, this slogan would be, you say here, "A key factor in how we differentiate ourselves from alternative financial service providers, that is the payday lenders, as we prepare to go public." Right?

 - Q. Because at one point were you -- were you running, like, three payday websites at the same time: PayDay One, PayDay Select and PayDay Okay?
 - A. I think that was right. Different -different channels for each one was the general
 - Q. Was it more or less the same product or. . .
- 11 A. They were -- actually, I can't remember. I 12 think there were pricing differences and channel 13 differences.
 - Q. When you say --

A. I think at the time, also, there was this idea that because Google, in particular, for search engine marketing, you were rewarded by having a placement. You know, if somebody typed in "payday loan," you would get a placement. But if you have three products, you take up the top three placements. So you're getting more of sort of the customer eyeballs, and you have a better chance that the customer is going to go to one of your websites.

A. Yes.

23

25

And when we were talking to the investor community, we didn't want them thinking, oh, this is distinguish both the pricing differences, which as we've highlighted we thought were significant; the just a payday loan. We wanted to be able to migrate the balances," why don't you just explain what that -- what that means.

A. So as the -- the ThinkCash -- at this point, the ThinkCash portfolio pays down, you know, they -- I'm sorry, I'll sort of just provide all the background. So the way the portfolios work, we provide the marketing services to help the lender originate the loan. There's marketing costs associated with that. Then once those customers are acquired, if you will, if the customers need more credit over time, they typically come back to that same lender.

And this is a customer that is a pretty income constrained, doesn't have a lot of credit options. And so there is a fair amount of reuse of the product by customers once they pay off their first loan. So this is referring to the customers that paid off their loans, getting them a, you know, new loan with a new lender and sort of optimally keeping that portfolio balance as -- as high as possible.

Q. And that's ultimately what happened with regard to -- the ThinkCash customers ultimately were migrated to Plain Green rather than Great Plains Lending, right?

there was a complete overlap or a -- or a change in the lending structure. But in both the cases of the bank and with the tribal lenders, ultimately, the originating lenders made the -- the final decision on what customers -- you know, what states they would originate into.

Q. Even -- really? With Plain Green and Great Plains Lending, they're the ones that, when you say "made that decision," I'm sure there was an approval of some sort. But in terms of actually analyzing the states and figuring out where you would go or where you wouldn't go, just be careful because they're -- they're about ready to all jump at this but you're sure -- but you said it was the tribes that made that decision, right?

A. I said -- I said --

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. There was a lot in your so-called question before you asked the question that was incredibly objectionable. So object to the form.

You can answer the question.

A. So I said ultimately that decision is one of the originating lender. And, I guess, the example I give is I think it's the case -- and, again, hopefully I'm right -- in the case of the

- A. Yeah, you know, "migrating" is a -- is a weird term because it's really more of a remarketing
- 3 to those customers and making them aware of that
- loan product so they don't just go to some other lender. But, yes, ultimately the way it happened --
- 6 there's a few different twists and turns along the
- way, but ultimately, the ThinkCash customers were redirected -- or remarketed to -- to Plain Green
- 9 when that product became live.10 O. Now, my understanding
 - Q. Now, my understanding of the -- the deal documents with the First Bank of Delaware was that the decision of -- that it was actually First Bank of Delaware which made the decision which states ThinkCash would or would not be in. Is that your recollection?
 - A. Oh, yes.
 - A. On, yes.

 Q. Okay. And so that's kind of what you're referring to when you're saying that there's the potential of expanding the product to all -- well, to 48 -- to a larger number of states because you no longer would be bound by what First Bank of Delaware was deciding with regard to state coverage; am I right?
 - A. I'm -- actually, I don't know what the state coverage of the bank was, whether it was --

 - A. Right.
- 9 Q. And the Tunica-Biloxi didn't want to 10 generate any loans in the state of Louisiana?
 - That may be correct.
 - Q. Okay. So other than the states in which they actually resided -- by the way, do you know why none of these tribes wanted to lend this -- to offer these loans to other residents of their state?
 - A. I believe that was advice they got from their counsel. I don't know the specifics of what that advice was based on.
 - Q. Okay. But with regard to Plain Green or Great Plains Lending, I mean,, for the most part, at least initially, other than Louisiana, Montana and Oklahoma, they were all in or not in the same list of states, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Like those and others.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Okay. Why don't you flip the page. We're now into January of 2011. This is also a report that we discussed -- a board memo we discussed with Mr. Harvison. So this is P-123. If you'd turn to page 2, there's a discussion of advances in risk scoring. And, I mean,, we've previously -- you previously talked to us about the risk and analytics

- Page 279
- O. All right.
- A. I guess I just wanted to highlight --

A. At this point in time, that's what we felt.

- Q. Sure.
- 5 A. -- but you sort of suggested that we were,
- 6 you know -- you know, at this point in time sort of
 - viewed our -- our business as PayDay One and
- 8 ThinkCash. This is my recollection, I didn't see it 9
 - on the previous, but there was this view that we had
- 10 some pretty exciting other bank partnership
 - opportunities that we were, at that point in time,
- 12 confident about being able to close on. First
- 13 Premier was one. Later, there's -- there's other
- 14 banks. So throughout this time period, we're still 15
- very aggressively focused on trying to license our
- 16 technology to banks as well as nonbank lenders. 17 Q. And had there been a bank willing to do
- 18 the -- a product like First Bank of Delaware, it 19 might have -- you might have gone in that direction 20 rather than tribal, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form; calls for speculation.

You can answer the question if you can.

A. I can't say which we would have proposed, which would have gone forward. It would have platform, and this is -- you're just -- you're just

- 3 up with for that platform, right? Am I right?
 - A. Yes.
 - Q. Okay. And that's -- and those
 - improvements, that -- that was -- even though it's under PayDay One, it would have been after the --
 - the platform, in general, across all the products
- 9 using -- using the decision engine, correct?
 - A. Not necessarily. The risk scores were oftentimes developed for the individual portfolio.
- 12 There was overlapping approaches, but sometimes 13 there was a -- a uniform score. Most often the
- 14 scores were kind of customized within each loan
- 15 portfolio.
- 16 Q. Okay. Now, you also -- you see it's
- 17 ThinkCash/Great Plains Lending. So this is -- this
- 18 is still -- and you can -- reading the text about
- 19 you're still happy with the Otoe-Missouria. Do you 20 see that?
- 21
 - A. Yes.
- 22 Q. So this is January 21st. Still, at this
- 23 point in time, the assumption was it was going to be 24 the Otoe-Missouria that were going to be sponsoring
- 25 that first tribal installment loan product, right?

- depended on the deal terms, I would imagine.
- 2 MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. All right.
- 3 Let's turn to the next board report. And this is
- 4 one that wasn't previously identified, so let's call
- 5 this P-282. Let's just stick this in the book so
 - you'll have it. Give me the book for a second. So
- 7 Exhibit 282 is TF-PA 170233.
 - (Exhibit No. 282 marked.)
- 9 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- 10 Q. So this is now a month later. And 11
 - February 17th, 2011, and you're thanking God for
- 12 PayDay One. Do you remember that?
- 13 A. That's what I wrote here, yes. I don't 14 specifically remember writing, "Thank God for PayDay
 - One."
- 16 Q. Well, because at this point you're -- this
- 17 is -- it's already 2011. There are no more loan
- 18 originations for ThinkCash, and the only -- you said
- the only domestic product we're marketing at the 19
- 20 moment is PayDay One, right?
- A. You know, obviously, we had -- we had just 21
- 22 bought the UK business, which was a pretty
- 23 interesting opportunity. But PayDay One, at this
- 24 point, was certainly the driving majority of what we
- 25 could see as ongoing revenue streams.

70 (Pages 277 to 280)

Kenneth Rees Page 281 but we have your April report, and we're going to 1 Q. Okay. So in terms of ThinkCash to Great 1 2 Plains Lending -- now, this is now February 17th. 2 identify this as P-283. I'm putting it in my book 3 Still the assumption was you're going to be able to 3 4 4 close the deal with Mark Curry and the 5 5 Otoe-Missouria, right? 6 6 MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. 7 7 A. As you know, we were looking to close the deal with the Otoe-Missouria tribe directly. 8 8 9 9 BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 10 Q. Right. And this is now on page 2. You 10 say, "We are scrambling to bring Great Plains 11 11 12 12 Lending live in February. Although I expected 13 13 potential setbacks due to technical factors, the IT 14 team has done a fantastic job getting everything 14 15 ready ahead of plan," and they've "delivered a solid 15 16 platform on time." Do you see that? 16 17 A. Yes. 17 point, yes. 18 Q. Okay. So remember, I was asking you before 18 19 19 when we were looking at the "Gentlemen start your 20 engines e-mail," that was February 28th. So this 20 21 is -- this is, you know, 11 days before that. It 21 22 22 A. Yes. looks like the IT team has actually gotten the 23 23 platform ready to roll, you're just waiting for --24 waiting for the final deal to materialize, right? 24 25 MR. rather than yours. It's late in the day. (Exhibit No. 283 marked.) BY MR. ACKELSBERG: Q. So this is, roughly, two months after the last report we looked at where it all looked like it was moving towards Great Plains Lending. And not only have you signed a deal --A. Actually, I think you mean -- oh, you're right, Great Plains Lending. Thank you. O. And it looks like in the two months not only have you closed a deal with a different tribe, but it's already online and doing fantastic business. Do you see that? A. Yes, it looks like they're live by that Q. And the reason it's doing so well is you say, "Primarily due to former customers, and we haven't even e-mailed the old ThinkCash customers yet." Do you see that?

Q. So at some point, an e-mail was sent to ThinkCash customers advising them of the opportunity to apply for loans to -- to --

A. As I said at the time, and I put in perspective, there was an awful lot of activities going on at that point. The acquisition of the -of the UK business, ongoing bank negotiations, but we were very excited about the potential to bring Great Plains live and -- and anticipate that that's what would happen. BY MR. ACKELSBERG: Q. All right. Let's move to the next month.

By the way -- and I guess I should direct this to Matt.

MR. ACKELSBERG: We don't -- I don't -- we looked for it. I don't believe we have the report that Mr. Rees presumably made to the board in March of 2011 where, I think, we would have had a little more information about -- about Plain Green. So I believe I've made a request earlier in some e-mail or letter, but if you could check, please, about whether the March 2011 report exists, and if it's -- or if it's being withheld. I mean,

MR. SHELDON: I'm happy to look into it for you and report back after the deposition. MR. ACKELSBERG: Thank you. So let's -- let's -- we don't have March,

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Am I right?

A. So customers who apply for credit get an account name and a password, and they use that to access what's called the "my account" page of the websites, like most other online lenders. They can

A. I mean, -- I'm sorry, just to -- that's what he was frustrated about, is not that RISE was growing, but he thought we were taking customers that should have rightfully been the tribes and redirecting them. He was just wrong about that.

Q. So you mentioned that the relations with Mark Curry on the Great Plains Lending side were a little strained at times. How were the relations with the Tunica-Biloxi?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form; misstates the testimony.

You can answer the question.

A. The Tunica-Biloxi, I mean,, each -- each of the tribal partners had -- you know, they were different to deal with. There were certain benefits of working with the Tunica-Biloxi. In particular, their chairman at the time -- actually, a really interesting guy and -- and interested in really pushing us to drive down the rates, which I found very refreshing. I think he was very much a consumer advocate. So there was a lot of positives with working with him. We liked the product. But Page 315 risk in the program to the tribe and that she didn't think the lending program made sense for the tribe.

3 The other members of the council were supportive, 4

but it led to, on occasion, you know, challenging

5 interactions because she was very negative to the 6 program and vocal on that.

> MR. ACKELSBERG: Let's look at another exhibit.

MR. SCHEFF: Irv, after this document, let's take a little break. We have been going for a little more than an hour.

> MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. This is 288. (Exhibit No. 288 marked.)

A. (Reviews document.)

Yes

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

17 Q. So your -- I'm not sure who you're --18 you're interacting with Michelle Curtis at RLJ 19 Companies. Do you see that?

A. She's Bob Johnson's assistant.

Q. Okay. Now, at this point -- I think at this point Think Finance already acquired RJL. Am I right?

A. No. RJL (sic) was a separate entity. RJL, actually, was the -- RJL is the holding company of

1 the -- the council, as far as I could tell, did have

2 some concerns, and so it made our interactions with the tribal council sometimes -- you know, there was 4 some conflicts there.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. So just to be -- to be clear, so -- and I want to just get the personalities straight.

A. Yeah.

Q. So the Mobiloans had some staff, had -- had executives. One of them was, I think, someone named Kim Palermo. Do you remember Kim?

A. I vaguely remember Kim. I remember the name. I don't know if I met her.

Q. But the tribal council would have been Marshall? Is that -- I'm just trying to understand where the problems were.

A. Yeah, so -- of the people we met with, we had very good relationships, but there was one member, her name was Brenda. I don't remember what her last name is, but she was -- she was difficult

20 21 22 Q. Did she think that -- was she expressing 23 concerns that the tribe was not being treated fairly 24 by Think Finance?

A. She said that she thought that there was

Bob Johnson's various investments. We bought one of his investment companies. I think what's became 3 MySalaryLine. I may not be getting that exactly right. But Bob Johnson still had RLJ Companies. I

5 think he still does. And Michelle was the person

6 who would take -- he doesn't read his own e-mails,

7 so she would take the e-mails and print them out and 8 hand them to him.

Q. Okay. And -- and Bob Johnson was the one that had originally connected Think Finance to the Tunica-Biloxi; am I right?

A. Yeah, I don't remember how he had a relationship with them, but he -- he did have some sort of a relationship and thought that they might be a good -- good partner for the program.

Q. Okay. And so you're saying to Michelle, this is September 26, 2013, "We are near the point of terminating our relationship with Tunica-Biloxi. They've been extremely difficult to work with." Do you see that? "If we don't complete the deal, it will not be the worst thing in the world." Do you see that?

MR. SCHEFF: Why don't you finish reading the rest of the e-mail so he has got the whole thing, Irv?

- A. A guy named Kevin Dahlstrom.
 - Q. He was your marketing guy, wasn't he?
- A. He was the chief marketing officer, correct.
- Q. And is that product live?
- A. I think it is. I literally don't know anything about the size of the portfolio, what the products are, but I believe that it is live.
- Q. Do you -- do you know the label name, the website name?
 - A. I don't.

- 12 Q. And so Kevin sort of set up a company doing 13 what Think Finance used to do, providing services to 14 tribal lenders?
 - A. I really don't know whether he's a direct lender or licenses technology in some point, whether they work with banks or tribes. I just don't know.
 - Q. Is he based here in Fort Worth?
- 19 A. I think that that operation is out of 20 Dallas.
 - Q. Do you know what tribe they're partnered with?
- 23 A. I don't know that they're partnered with a 24 tribe at all.
 - Q. Well, who's the lender? Do you know?

- only made sense as sort of part of what we thought we were doing with tribes. I mean,, I have to say, it was part of what we had some pride in was providing economic benefits to the tribe.
- So what we saw, as when we were providing just in skills training, it wasn't enough. We were seeing a lot of turnover in basic stuff, like, showing up to work for time -- you know, on time. There was a, you know, just basic sort of more -you know, how you -- it's almost mindset training, if you will, how to think about a job and how to interact with that job was what was hard.

So it -- I recognize in saying it needs to be more like a prison program or programs for addicts sounds terrible. What I was trying to get at is the training we provide and the training we support needs to be more than just the skills of the job. It needs to be more broad-based, how to be an effective member of the workforce and how to contribute to the growth of the business. And we hoped that would be above and beyond what happened specifically with this program. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And you were talking mainly about -- about the call center employees, right?

A. They may be a direct lender. Actually, if I had to -- you know, my understanding, because I really haven't asked, I mean,, I -- it's -- well, I just haven't asked. So my thought, they were a direct lender, rightly or wrongly.

Q. Okay. So if we go to the exhibit, maybe you can just explain to us what's going on here.

MR. SCHEFF: I'm sorry, is there a -explain what's going on?

All right. To the extent that you can answer that question, go ahead.

A. I would be glad to.

So this is actually something that as we were, you know, watching the tribal programs evolve and grow, one of the challenges was getting employment on the reservation to support those -those tribes. And we thought it made more sense, and certainly supported what the reservation was trying to do, to have the employment for the tribal lending businesses be tribal members. It wasn't a requirement.

They could have hired outsiders. And, obviously, as you mentioned, Plain Green did for their program because there weren't tribal members to support the tribal program. But we thought it

- A. Mainly about the call center, but it would have been anybody. We, actually, at one point in time were -- as actually it mentions here, we had an idea that, you know, we could provide sort of a program through the local college that anybody in the reservation could use, and whether they were ultimately hired by the tribe or just used those skills to find other work or do other things on or off the reservation, that was sort of part of our what we think -- thought was our commitment to, you know, the tribal partners that we worked with.
 - Q. But you discovered that was sort of more challenging than you thought at conception?
- A. Yeah, I mean, it's just a lot of work to set that up. And so we did expand -- and I don't --I mean, this was something that was primarily around the jobs that the -- that the tribal lender had established for customer support. I think there were some -- you know, there was some accounting, I think.

I can't speak to the full suite of jobs that they -- that they had as part of the managing the program, but there was, you know, definitely the skills program that was managed by our training staff that worked with third parties and helped

Q. In what situations?

A. It was a lawsuit against a board member.

O. A board member of Think Finance?

A. A board member of Think Finance, correct.

Q. In connection with his departure from the company?

A. No, no, no. It was in connection with a business deal we had with his previous company.

Q. Which board member was that?

A. Steve Shaper.

Q. And what was his previous company?

sure I let you finish your answer before I ask another 1 2 question, and wait until I'm done with my question 3 before you begin your answer. 4

Does that make sense?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. If you need a break during the day today, let us know, and we should be able to accommodate it, as long as a question isn't pending. But we'll take pretty regular breaks during the day with an eyes towards wrapping up with you as soon as possible so you can get back to your life.

A. Great. Things.

Q. Given your position at Think Finance, it's obviously likely that you came into information that was protected by Think finance's attorney-client privilege -- information, legal advice that Think's attorneys gave to the company.

We don't want you to tell us any of that information today. If I ask a question during today's hearing and the basis for your answer would solely be information that Think's attorneys passed on to you or that was relayed to you, please tell me that, and I'll ask you some kind of surrounding questions, and we'll figure out if it's appropriate for you to give us the answer.

threshold refers to. I'm sorry.

Q. That's okay.

Based on how the Mobiloans product is designed as a line of credit product, is every time GPLS decided for some period of time not to continue buying participation interest, does that mean that Mobiloans' consumers could not make subsequent draws on their lines?

A. Really it -- well, it -- it -- it meant really exactly that, that they wouldn't buy participations from Mobiloans at that time.

Q. So -- and I get what the impact of that would be on Plain Green and Great Plains. It would mean that they couldn't originate individual loans if they didn't have GPLS ready to buy the participation interest.

But as it pertains to Mobiloans where you have the a line of credit structure, is the effect, then, that not only could they not originate new lines but they wouldn't be able to permit existing customers to make multidraws on their existing lines?

A. If the -- if the tribe did not have access to sufficient funding from another source, they wouldn't be able to originate any more credit for the customers, that's correct.

percent cash credit for investment we've made in GPLS?

A. I don't know the specifics. I -- I do know that the tribes were trying to grow very aggressively, and so they would have been -- you know, the -- any sort of -- any times that GPLS wouldn't buy participations, that slowed down the growth of those businesses.

As to the 50 percent cash credit, as -- as we discussed, Think Finance made a -- an investment in -- in GPLS, and, again, I'm not sure exactly -- I could -- I could speculate about what that cash credit is, but -- but obviously it related to the investment that Think -- that Think Finance made in GPLS.

Q. Is this -- the investment that's referenced here, that's separate from the guarantee that Think was obligated to provide?

A. I don't -- I believe the investment form---formed a collateralization for that guarantee.

Q. That's all the same thing?

A. I believe so.

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. But even if you don't understand the specifics of some of what Mr. Lutes is referring to here, your understanding is that this is an effort by Think Finance to get GPLS to make more cash available to help the tribal lending businesses originate more

Q. Okay. And that would be new lines and multidraws for Mobiloans?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that would be just individual new loans for Great Plains and Great Plains?

A. Correct.

O. Looking at --

A. I -- there was, of course, cash flow coming back to the tribes, so they -- they may have tried to do some ongoing fundings, and they probably would have focused on multidraws, but I -- I don't know the specifics of -- of whether -- you know, this adjusted multidraws stopped for at least some period of time.

Q. Okay. On line number four, Mr. Lutes writes to you, I'm going to present VPC with a balance sheet analysis that shows we should get 50 percent cash credit for investment we had in GPLS. This would equate to about 35 million in additional cash variability. That would enable us to grow more aggressively beginning 10/1. Tom was okay with this, assuming ACH continues to be stable.

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have an understanding of what Mr. Lutes is referring to with respect to the 50

1 loans?

Q. And then No. 5, then hopefully by 11/1, we can get them to drop the cash requirement down to 25 percent from 50 percent so we can continue to grow aggressively in November and December.

Do you know what that means?A. I -- I don't know for certain, but I believe it's in line with what we just discussed.

Q. Same general idea as in No. 4 there, trying to get GPLS to make more cash available?

A. That's what it appears, yes.

Q. Earlier you were giving me a tutorial on the differences between a lending relationship and the acquisition of a participation interest and kind of the different characteristics of that.

What -- are you familiar with any other businesses that use -- in the lending business that use the acquisition of participation interest financing model that the tribal lenders use?

A. Yes.

Q. Which ones can you think of?

A. I should -- a large percentage of financial services, mortgages originated, and then participations bought.

 - Q. Well, let's just talk about your hiring by Think Finance. How did that -- how did that happen?
- 11 A. I think the connection at the time was --12 well, one, Think Finance didn't have -- and it
- 13 technically wasn't Think Finance at the time. The

- 16 The connection was is that my CEO at 17 Silicon Valley Bank, John Dean, was an early
- 18 investor in Think Finance, or the predecessor
- 19 company. He was also on the board of directors. He
- 20 knew they were looking for a chief financial

- 23 I think, you know, the way it was pitched 24 to me is that this was an entity that was looking to

- 5 financial services. They kind of bootstrapped the
- 6 company up with their own capital, and, you know,
- 7 local funding efforts. Generated, I think, a decent
- 8 sized company. I mean, it was probably -- I know
- 9 when I joined in -- at the end of 2006, per my
- 10 recollection of looking at the audited financials
- when I arrived, that they had 86 million of revenue, 11
- 12 and that would have all been from the payday product
- 13 that they were offering at that point in time.
- 14 They brought in the venture capitalists in
- 15 2005. September of 2005, Sequoia Capital, at that
- 16 round and then again in February of 2006. But
- 17 the -- the venture capital money raised ended up 18 being really a liquidity event for the original
- 19 founders/investors in the company. Not my prior
- 20
- CEO, John Dean, with Startup Capital Ventures. It
- 21 would have been the -- the two local Fort Worth

Q. That -- is it -- am I correct, that under this agreement, the loans that were originated in the name of First Bank of Delaware, with regard to those -- each of those loans, a 99 percent participation interest was conveyed to Think -- TF Financial on a daily basis?

A. Based on my recollection and looking at this agreement, each day 99 percent participation interest in the ThinkCash installment loan product. Your question had referred to just the bank product, but this would be the ThinkCash installment loan product was sold by First Bank of Delaware to TC Financial, LLC.

Q. Yeah, and just so that we're clear during this period of time, the company still had its own PayDay One label that it -- it was marketing, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question.

MR. SHELDON: Same objection.

A. Yes, at that point in time in early 2007, the company was also marketing -- lending directly a Payday One product.

Page 35

- A. I would say it -- I would phrase that as it evolved based upon the bank and feedback the bank was receiving, from my perspective, from the FDIC and its regulators on how to further strengthen the structure of the product.
- Q. And what do you remember about some of that feedback?
- A. The -- the first feedback that I remember would have been sometime -- and I'm guessing, so forgive me if I'm off a year or so -- sometime in mid to late 2008. I don't think it was in 2009. I think it would have been late 2008 that Alonzo Primus, the -- and I believe I'm pronouncing his name right -- the CEO and president of First Bank of Delaware -- and this is my recollection. He didn't have this discussion with me.

But what I believe happened was, is that he had talked with Ken Rees after the bank, I think, had gone through their first FDIC exam with this program and the ThinkCash installment loan in place. And the feedback was, is that the regulators were -would recommend that we set up an SPV type structure. And by "we," the bank would set up an SPV type structure.

They realized that the bank was capital

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And so from the standpoint of view as -- as a financial -- as the CFO in terms of the financial activity being generated by these two products, you had -- you had on your balance sheet the -- the loans that were -- the PayDay One loans that were made directly, right? Those were on the balance sheet, correct?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

- A. Yes. The PayDay loans sat directly on our balance sheet since we were the direct lender. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- Q. And a 99 percent interest in the -- in the ThinkCash loans during this period of time would also have been sitting on the balance sheet?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Yes, the 99 percent participation purchased from the bank on the ThinkCash installment loans were also on our balance sheet.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG: Q. Okay. And then during the course of 2007 and then into 2008, the transaction with -- the structure, the arrangement that your company had with First Bank of Delaware, it went through various iterations, various revisions; am I right?

constrained and couldn't keep, you know, all of those install- -- ThinkCash installment loans on their books. Rather than selling a 99 percent interest back to -- back to TC Financial, LLC, they recommended to the bank that the bank set up an SPV and have third-party investors, lenders lend to that SPV and have that SPV purchase the participations, the 99 percent participations from the bank.

I think they also recommended some other changes, such as instituting a licensing technology-type agreement whereby a Think Finance entity would provide licensing the -- the technology loan platform for the bank and also the underwriting scores as suggestions for -- to help the bank underwrite those customers. And there probably would have been some changes to the marketing agreement, I believe, as well at that point in time.

- Q. And you think those were actually suggestions by the FDIC?
- A. That is my recollection or my general understanding. Again, I didn't have a privy direct conversation with the Alonzo or the bank regarding that, or did I ever see, but that was my impression.
 - Q. Since you didn't hear from that -- from the FDIC directly, or from the bank, I mean -- well, how we're talking about, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question if you can.

A. Yeah, let me restate that a little bit, because, again, I get where you're going with the intent. But the bank would approve a ThinkCash installment loan customer for a loan. They would

8 fund out of their own bank account -- let's assume

9 it was a $2,000 loan to the customer. They would 10 fund all $2,000 out of that -- out of their own funds to that customer, typically, via ACH on an overnight basis. So they would approve a customer on a Monday. Typically, the customer would receive 14 the funds on a Tuesday via ACH.

Q. And then at some point, I don't know whether -- whether it was still on the current business day or -- I know later it became a two-day delay. But then at some point, the participation transaction occurs, and some of that 2,000 -- in that example, some of that money would then be replaced by the participation entity; am I right?

 MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.
 You can answer the question if you can.
 A. Yeah, my recollection -- recollection and

A. Capital can be defined many ways, so I'm not -- you know, from my perspective -- let me rephrase your question, but I think I still get the intent of it by answering it this way. The bank was using their own funds -- BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

2007 -- well, one thing that it did was the bank was going to retain a larger percentage of an interest percent share -- a 1 percent ownership stake to a

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. In reviewing this amendment to the master believe that based on my recollection and in looking participation agreement on Section 2.2(a), yes, I at this document as well, what this Section 2.2(a) of the amendment is doing is increasing the bank retaining 10 percent of the ThinkCash installment original agreement would have been the bank keeping

Q. Now, with regard to the bank's stake, which was originally 1 percent but then a few months later became -- became 10 percent, was the bank using its loans on its books and selling 90 percent to, I believe, TC Financial, as opposed to the prior

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

of the stake in the product?

in the -- in the loans, right? It went from a 1

10 percent ownership stake; am I right?

O. Yes.

A. -- to originate all of the loan and retain 10 percent, whether that came in the form of equity capital or debt or deposits from their bank customers, however, they were using their own liquidity to originate a hundred percent and then also to maintain 10 percent on their books.

Q. Okay. So -- right. And I appreciate the clarification. And I'm sure this is going to happen over the course of the day that I'm not -- this isn't my field, and it's -- it's been quite an experience trying to understand all this.

But -- so the loan -- on day one the loan is made, and that loan -- and what that means is, money is going to go into a consumer's account, right? That's -- in a practical sense, that's what funding a loan means, someone's got to come up with the dollars -- the lending -- the lending capital to put into a consumer's bank account. That's what understanding is, is that -- well, first, a lot of this -- you know, in regards to this particular amendment, again, I believe -- I don't have direct knowledge, but I believe that the reason for this change from the bank holding just 1 percent -- retaining 1 percent to 10 percent was upon the recommendation of the FDIC or its regulators. Because from my perspective in what I heard, the regulators wanted the bank to have more skin in the game, so to speak, you know, have more of the loan balance on their books on a routine basis.

They would then, you know, sell under this agreement the 10 percent or -- pardon me. They would retain 10 percent and sell 90 percent. So in my example, if we had a $2,000 loan, if they originated a $2,000 loan, they approve a customer on a Monday, overnight via ACH the $2,000 gets deposited into the customer's account the bank, the bank's account on a Tuesday, on that Tuesday we would also -- we, in terms of helping the bank -- "we" being Think Finance helping the bank settle that using our loan platform, remit $1,800 back to the bank. So that way the bank would end up holding $200 on their balance sheet, and TC Financial would have $1800, or 90 percent participation interest.

Again, it's because, from my perspective, the bank's capital constrained. I also don't think the bank's regulators wanted them holding a hundred percent of these -- I think the regulators probably view these, rightly or wrongly, more risky than your traditional mortgage or prime credit cards, so they didn't want the bank setting aside a large amount of capital for these types of loans, but they were comfortable with the bank retaining up to 10 percent of the loan balances on their books.

Q. Okay. And the other thing it looks happened in September of 2007, was the introduction of a concept called "revenue share." Am I right? That's -- that's when the revenue share started?

A. To be honest, from my perspective, I would have assumed it started day one, but I may be wrong on that. I mean, that -- certainly, Exhibit E, this particular amendment introduces -- or I shouldn't say introduces -- definitely details out the computation of program revenues.

So based upon looking at this amendment, I would say that, yes, this would probably be the first time that the concept of a program revenue share between TC Financial and First Bank of participations at a premium or through other some type of, you know, revenue share, profit share type 4 Q. And just so that we're clear on what we 5 mean by "revenue share," so we're talking about a 6 percentage based fee on the -- on the 90 percent 7 that the bank is selling off, right? That's, 8 essentially, what we're talking about, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. In looking at Exhibit E of this amendment, you know, it says "Computation of Program Revenues," and it says, "TC Financial shall pay the lender" -and the lender is First Bank of Delaware -- "a percentage of program revenues as follows."

And let me read it for a second.

Delaware came into play.

And it's possible, I guess, in retrospect, looking back, that probably weren't sure, we and the bank, you know, whether the product would take off. And I think at this point in time, as I recall, the -- the bank was pretty successful in originating loans to consumers during that point in time.

And so I think at that point, my guess is -- again, I wasn't involved in -- even though I was the CFO, strangely, I wasn't -- I don't recall being involved in the discussions as to what the profit share amount should be, but we probably decided, hey, we've got to figure out a way to, you know -- because most financial banks, when they're selling, are either retaining mortgage servicing rights, to your point, in generating some fee income or selling the participations at a premium or doing something to kind of get compensated for the fact if you're only -- if you're originating a hundred percent of the loan but only keeping 10 percent of the loan on your books, you're certainly giving up some amount of revenue stream by selling the participation off.

And a lot of times, at least it's my understanding, that companies will sell those Page 48

1 percent of the loans or just on the 90 percent 2 participation, but. . .

O. Okay. But --

A. But at a minimum, it would be at least on a -- on --

Q. Yeah. Okay. Now, we're talking about consumer loans with an average APR in excess of 200 percent, right?

A. I mean, because we had other products, we've had other things over time. I do know that they would be north of 36 percent.

Q. Okay. Now, at the time that -- this is in the 2007 time period. Am I right that First Bank of Delaware had products that it was marketing through other entities besides Think Finance, other so-called service providers?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Based on my recollection -- again, I did not have a lot of direct interaction with -- with the bank at all during that time span -- I would assume that since they're a bank, they offer lots of products and services. They take deposits. They make loans. But I'm not aware of, you know, who they partnered with if they had other types of partners similar to our type of arrangement. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. I mean, specifically, online lenders.

24 A. I do not have any recollection.

Q. Okay. Now --

Page 51

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer. A. Again, my recollection based on that point in time -- and, again, I think a lot of the suggestions for these amendments or evolution of the program came directly from the bank. They weren't, based on my understanding, you know, suggestions from us. It was suggested by Alonzo Primus, the CEO and president of First Bank of Delaware. And,

10 again, I will assume that a lot of those 11 recommendations that he requested related to the

12 program came from his discussions with the regulators through the second -- or first or second exam related to them overseeing the product.

14 15 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

O. I mean, I don't --

A. But, yet, to answer the question more directly, yes, based on my recollection, sometime in late 2008, based upon the bank's recommendations, we further amended or at least changed the name of the marketing entity to TailWind Marketing. Yes, there -- at that time, I think, there was the first agreement from a Decision -- TC Decision Sciences' standpoint licensing the technology and platform and underwriting scores to the bank to help them

A. I'll qualify that in one sense. And I apologize. I would have assumed later that when we get to the point of Universal Fund II, the reason why there's a Universal Fund II is because there was a Universal Fund I with some other program. I do not know what that program related to, whether that was north of 36 percent APR loans, whether it was online or partnering with a brick-and-mortar program, but I do know when we get to discussing -and I assume at some point we will discuss Universal Fund II -- the reason why it was called, and that was a name that the bank, Alonzo Primus, suggested because there was already a Universal Fund I that we had nothing to do with.

Q. So let's go -- let's go to the Universal Fund period and -- but just -- and we can look at the deal documents if we need to, but just to try to cut through it, in roughly October 2008, there were new -- new deal documents between Think and First Bank of Delaware where the marketing was going to be charged by TailWind and the technology services by TC Decision Sciences. Do you remember that --

23 MR. SCHEFF: Object to --24 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. -- in October 2008?

originate their loans. Yes.

Q. Okay. So we don't need to -- we don't need to go over the agreements. Just on that point that you -- that you just -- you just mentioned, that you do remember that in October 2008, the services being provided by -- previously by TC Loan Services were split into two different agreements, one with the Think entity called TailWind and the other with the Think entity called TC Decision Sciences, you remember that, and you remember it being at the instigation of First Bank of Delaware?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. You can answer if you can.

A. In -- in 2008, fall of 2008, my understanding is, is that, yes, we did amend the structure of the program, again, at the request of First Bank of Delaware, to amend the marketing agreement, and, in particular, change the name of the marketing entity from -- I think it was TC Loan Service, LLC, in this first agreement dated January 23, 2007, to TailWind Marketing, LLC, I believe.

And at the bank's request, we also entered into a new agreement with them, between TC Decision Sciences, LLC, and First Bank of Delaware, to formally officially license the technology platform, provide underwriting scores, other types of IT services related to their ThinkCash installment loan product

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

1.5

Q. Okay. And then we get to the Universal Fund, which, as I understand, it was formed in 2008 but didn't actually start functioning until -- until sometime in early 2009. Does that sound right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer.

A. I'm not -- I don't quite recollect when the Universal Fund II was actually established. We didn't own that legal entity, "we" being ThinkCash, Think Finance at the time, whatever our corporate -- legal corporate entity name was. Universal Fund II was -- was never owned by us, so I'm not quite sure when it was established and who established it. And I actually don't even recall at that time -- because this is also, appreciate, kind of at the height of the financial crisis.

I mean, Think Finance -- or ThinkCash, the way prior to -- for -- the way TC Financial, LLC, came up with the cash to purchase the 90 percent participations was with a lending relationship with facilities with Silver Point Capital -- and I can't remember if it was a combined facility for both

3 products or two separate facilities for each product, that was negotiated prior to me stepping on as CFO in January 2007. Ken Rees and Jason Harvison

6 had kind of closed that financing transaction with

7 Silver Point just prior to me arriving.

So the -- it would have been done prefinancial crisis in the 2006 time span. And I think the rates seemed very reasonable and attractive, certainly compared to, you know, post-financial crisis or during the financial crisis. Ultimately, what the cost of funds related to, you know, any of -- any of the loans, whether it's our direct lending or whether, you know, for the -- the people originating and what the lenders lend to the SPV end up getting, or even today from an Elevate perspective, you know, the cost of funds is most -- much higher --

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Right.

A. -- post-financial crisis. But I'm just --

23 I'm sorry, I was expecting that there was a

24 financing arrangement in advance of Universal Fund

II. But then let me finish my thought here, and a hedge fund called Silver Point Capital. I believe they were technically out of the Chicago; although, the hedge fund, I think, is in Connecticut, like most hedge funds.

And so through 2007 and 2008, Silver Point was providing the funding for TC Financial to purchase the participations, whether it was 90 percent or 99 percent originally, from First Bank of Delaware. Silver Point Capital was also providing financing to PayDay One, ThinkCash at the time, for the direct payday -- direct lending payday product --

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Do you remember --

A. -- as well.

Q. Do you remember how much you had to pay for that -- for their money back then?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. I -- I'm going to guess, the range would have been, roughly, 9 to 12 percent, but the agreement -- and that agreement, again, the reason I don't know -- I can't remember, it was floating rates, so it was -- and it was a revolver in nature, so I'm sure the rates were changing a little bit.

The agreement was at -- both -- both bear with me for a second.

What ended up happening during the financial crisis, and I specifically remember this in 2008, because that's when, you know, a lot of hedge funds, investments banks were really starting to struggle, primarily related to mortgage loans, credit cards, really not, from my perspective, anything related to do with nonprime installment loans with APRs greater than 36 percent. What really caused the financial crisis was, you know, just traditional mortgages at -- at higher rates but definitely well below 36 percent-type APR products. And certainly credit cards also struggled at that point in time.

But Silver Point had a lot of exposure and was highly leveraged. They came to us in 2008 and said: Hey, you know, we really need to skinny down or be repaid on our facility. And they had the right, per the -- the debt agreement, as I recall at that point in time, to request us to repay them.

And so that is when I remember myself and Ken Rees -- and Ken going to the bank and saying: Hey, you know, under the existing relationship with TC Financial, LLC, we're not going to be able to borrow as much, to continue to purchase

- 11 We'll continue to, you know, license our technology,
- 12 and you pay us under the marketing agreement and the

 - A. Yeah, that -- that --
- 10 MR. SCHEFF: You can answer the 11 question.
- 12 A. Yeah, you asked a couple of questions, or 13 comments in there. From my perspective, as I said,
- 14 ThinkCash, at the time, did not establish the
- 15 Universal Fund II.
 - BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- 17 Q. I understand that.
- 18 A. I know for a fact that Mark Wildstein was 19 the managing member, for lack of a better term, of 20 Universal Fund II. So I would assume that he would 21 have had to have been the person that signed the
 - legal documents establishing Universal Fund II.

As I said when I answered the last question, whether he did that himself or whether he got help from First Bank of Delaware or some other

- First Bank of Delaware, as -- as I understand it.
- 2 But how did it come to be? Who was doing what? How
- 3 did -- how did this all get put together?
- MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. 4
 - You can answer.
- 6 A. You've got a lot of questions there. I'll 7
 - try -- I think your first question was, you know,
- 8 who established Universal Fund II. As I said,
- 9 Universal Fund II was not our entity.
- 10 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - O. I understand.
- 12 A. I believe it was a gentleman named Mark
 - Wildstein who, you know, ended up being the manager,
- 14 managing member. I believe he technically
- 15 established Universal Fund II. Whether he did that
- 16 on his own or whether he did that with the help of
- 17 the bank -- the bank being First Bank of Delaware --
- 18 or some other third parties --
- 19 Q. We've already deposed Mr. Wildstein.
- 20 A. Okay.
- 21 MR. SCHEFF: Let him finish his
- 22 answer. Okay? You asked him a question. Let him
- 23 finish his answer
- 24 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. We've already deposed Mr. Wildstein, and sets of lawyers or other third-party consultants, whatnot, I don't recall us being actively involved at all in helping him set that up, and we definitely did not legally own that.

Again, this concept came -- was presented to us by Alonzo Primus at First Bank of Delaware because they had already established a similar type of structure once before, hence, the reason why this was Universal Fund II.

- O. Now, once the Universal Fund II was created, there -- as I understand it, a new -- a new contractual -- a new form of contract entered -entered the structure called an "administrative agency agreement." Do you remember that?
- A. I do remember us entering in as part of the proposed structure with First Bank of Delaware and Universal Fund II the administrative agency agreement.
- Q. And so before Universal -- before Universal entered the scene, we had a Think -- a Think entity called TailWind doing the marketing, right?
 - A. That is correct.
- Q. And paid a per-loan fee for that service?
- 24 A. That is correct.
 - Q. We had a TC Decision Sciences entity doing

Q. Okay. And now, with the entrance of the administrative agency agreement, we -- we have a new Think entity called TC Administrative Services, or TCAS, that was performing a function -- a new function called the administrative function under the administrative agency agreement, the administrative agent function?

A. As I --

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. Go ahead.

A. As I recall, the administrative agency agreement was a broader type of agreement. It was proposed by Alonzo, because what he had proposed with Universal Fund II, similar to Universal Fund I -- and I imagine they had a similar type of administrative agency agreement with Universal Fund I -- was -- what he proposed was, Universal Fund II is, in essence, an SPV, and he was going to go out with Mark Wildstein and find lenders, investors. I use that term interchangeably, and so pardon that. I know there might be a technical difference.

But, generally speaking, people that would approached us about creating an admin agency agreement that would really serve two purposes. One would just be to handle the basic accounting treasury administration of this SPV, which I guess happens in probably most SPV type of structure environments.

But, secondarily, and more importantly -and I think in the back of his mind he knew that we were losing some of the profitability from TC Financial purchasing participations directly from them, and we had lost our source of capital. His point to us was, would you be interested in providing the equivalent of a credit default swap to Universal Fund II so that the investors in Universal Fund II -- because if you think about it, Universal Fund II, if you look at just the basic P&L structure and balance sheet, it's getting 90 percent of the loan participations on its books. So it's going to get 90 percent of the revenue and incur 90 percent

Well, the investors lending to this, again, accredited but not overly sophisticated, you know, probably were worried about the risk of loss: What if I put my $100,000 in and then all of those loans go bad, I lose my $100,000? What they were put money into what I would -- quote, invest money into Universal Fund II. I don't believe they got an actual equity ownership but they're probably lending. That they would put money into this SPV to buy participations from the banks so that the bank can continue to originate loans, retain 10 percent on their books and sell 90 percent to this Universal Fund II SPV.

When he approached us about that concept, he said the difficulty that he -- that they would have in raising money in that SPV 2 was getting investors, lenders in -- in Universal Fund II to get comfortable with the credit risk of these north of 36 percent APR loans. A lot of these investors that he believed he could get money to lend into would be friends and family of First Bank of Delaware.

And so they're, I would assume, accredited investors but by no means are they a Silver Point Capital, hedge fund type of entity lending in, or a Victory Park Capital entity lending in. I mean, these are people investing 100,000, 250,000, whatnot.

So he believed that an important way for them -- "them" being the bank -- to get investors to -- to invest or lend to Universal Fund II, he interested in was a fixed return.

What Alonzo kind of proposed to us, and what we looked at and did the math on and it made sense from our perspective was enter -- as part of this admin agency agreement, let's enter into -- in essence, it becomes a credit default swap as well, whereby, if you took the revenue on the 90 percent of the loans, less the losses on the 90 percent of the loans, less some of the out-of-pocket expenses related to reimbursing the Universal Fund II, reimbursing the bank for the servicing, customer support, collections, data costs, anything related to specifically helping originate those loans, and then paying the bank their, for lack of a better term, profit share, premium, whatever we want to call it, how the bank was earning some additional revenue off the 90 percent that it had sold to Universal Fund II, it would then also, Universal Fund II, promise to pay these third-party investors, lenders to the Universal Fund II a fixed return. And I can't remember what it was. I know it was a very high teens, if not 20 percent return. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Would 18 percent sound about right?

A. 18 percent probably sounds about right.

Let me finish my thought. The net remaining P&L, if it was positive, by us -- what we agreed to do was buy the losses at 60 days past due. We define -- under the bank's charge-off policy, when a customer's loan went 60 days past due, it was deemed to be a charge-off, or a loss. And so what Alonzo requested that we work into this admin agency agreement as kind of the credit default swap is, is that when a loan -- any loan that went 60 days past due -- and the bank would, I assume, take a loss on their 10 percent, but the 90 percent held by the Universal Fund II, we would then buy that -- that loan, that 60-day past due loss loan off the books at par value and bring it off of Universal Fund. So if it was a $2,000 loan that went 60 days past due, at the end of the month, we would be responsible -- "we," the admin agency, I think it

- 1 the marketing, we felt comfortable that we could
 - enter into a credit default swap with Universal Fund
- 3 II. And it was a way for us to kind of enhance the
 - return that we were getting in addition to the
- 5 marketing fees and the technology fees, that we
- 6 could also get, you know, off this credit -- I call
 - it a credit default swap, you know, additional fee

8 income.

Q. All right.

A. And more importantly, for the bank, it was a way for them to really attract more third-party capital in so that they could continue to originate

But at the end of all that P&L, if the -if it was in a negative situation, TCAS, under a normal type of credit default situation, would be responsible for kind of -- if it was a negative

$10,000 at the end of the month, TCAS would be responsible for putting $10,000 into Universal Fund

II. So that way these investors knew that their principal at the end of every month -- Alonzo, I 11 remember him stressing, this is really critical.

12 Again, you know, these are friends and family of the principal -- you know, they're not interested in all of the upside on these loans, and they don't want to take any downside. They just want a fixed return,

13 bank. They want to be assured that their 14

A. Yes, to the extent that we invested some of our corporate available cash into the Universal Fund, like some of the other third-party investors, we would have returned, then, 18 or 17 percent, whatever the applicable interest would have been.

O. Okay. Thanks.

And the deal documents laying out all of these -- this structure -- and just to sort of -and this is really just meant to summarize. There would be services agreements between First Bank of Delaware and TailWind and TCDS, servicing or licensing the -- the agreements, providing for the fees that -- the number 1 and 2 we just talked about. MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer if you can.

A. Yes, there were -- there was a -- a marketing agreement between a Think Finance entity, TailWind Marketing and First Bank of Delaware. There was also a licensing and technology agreement between TC Decision Sciences and First Bank of 23 Delaware.

5 But I would assume that I would be somehow involved

6 in helping Mark describe the program.

Q. And I'm showing you a document --

A. And by Mark, I meant Mark Wildstein.

Q. Yes, I understand.

And I'm showing you a document that was identified at the Wildstein deposition as P-3. Oh, and by the way, the -- just so you know, the -- how these numbers work, we -- there's something called "Bates numbers." You're familiar with that term?

A. I'm not familiar. I heard it for the first time yesterday.

Q. Okay. All right. So what you're going to see over the course of the day are some documents that we, the plaintiff, got from Mr. Wildstein, some documents that we got from Think Finance, some documents that we got from Victory Park, and they're going to have -- and then they're numbered in order.

So what you're looking at is a document that was used in the Wildstein deposition and was agreement between First Bank of Delaware and the Universal Fund, correct?

A. Yes. Universal Fund II, there was a participation agreement.

Q. Yes. And then there would be an administrative agency agreement and a guarantee agreement between Think and the Universal Fund entity?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. By "Think," I would refer specifically there was an administrative agency agreement between TCAS, which is a subsidiary of Think, and the Universal Fund II, and then a corporate guarantee --I don't recall, I'm assuming that the corporate guarantee would have been at the parent level or at the TC Loan Services level to Universal Fund II,

A. Okay.

Q. All right. And so -- and so my question -my first question to you regarding this document is, do you recall participating in the creation of this document or documents like this?

A. Can you give me one second to look at this document?

Q. Sure.

A. Thank you.

1 Universal Fund II structure.

And, you know, the bank and we at Think Fina- -- ThinkCash, you know, agreed that, you know, we needed -- and by this point, it was now the end of 2010. The financial crisis is starting to wind down. I think more sophisticated institutional lenders/investors were getting more comfortable coming back in and providing liquidity into the marketplace, and so we were able to -- and by "we," we, us, ThinkCash and First Bank of Delaware -- were able to be put in touch through a third-party debt broker, for lack of a better term, with Victory Park Capital to come in and supplement with additional capital on top of or in excess of the existing investors in Universal Fund II.

By no means did they come in and swap out and we make all of the existing friends and family go. Let's just use a number. If the original friends and family number was, say, 50 million, Victory Park Capital came in and, I think, provided initially, I'm going to guess, an incremental 25 million in July of 2010. And I'm guessing as to the actual amount that they put in, but I do know that they came in, to your point, sometime of July 2010.

and my recollection of the deal structure, they wanted to create kind of their own SPV, kind of, like, a -- that would sit side by side, and that they would participate, for lack of a better term -- and this will really sound really strange and -- as I recall, I had never really -- sub-participations of the participations.

So the bank would continue to sell a 90 percent participation to Universal Fund II, and Universal Fund II would then turn around and sell either a hundred percent or some -- some percentage of that participation to the SPV that Victory Park Capital set up.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Okay. So let's --

A. But by no -- but I don't agree with the statement that they exerted control over -- over Universal Fund II.

Q. All right. We'll talk about that later. Just let's -- let's just situate things. The summer of 2010, as of that point in time, Think Finance still has, basically, two products, the direct lending product, PDO, that's still happening at that -- as of summer 2010, right?

A. In -- in 2010, we were still the direct

A. I -- I don't recall the specific interest rate. If you have a document that shows me, I can verify that.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well, all right. Would it be fair to say that Victory Park exerted more control over the --over the structure over the program than Mr. Wildstein had?

MR. SHAPIRO: Objection; form.

A. I absolutely disagree with that statement.

Victory Park Capital came in really under the existing general terms and structures of the product. They created, as you can appreciate, being a more sophisticated institutional investor/lender.

They -- as I recall, they did not want to put their money directly into the Universal Fund II SPV along with all of these friends and family less-sophisticated lenders/investors.

They got the advice, from my perspective

Q. And you still -- and then you had -- you had -- and your service provider for the -- for the ThinkCash installment loan product originated by First Bank of Delaware, right?

A. Yes, we were the -- the service providers we've discussed.

Q. And at that point in time, in the summer of 2010, as you described, the -- the participation was supplied by some combination of the old Universal Fund and some new SPV that Victory Park had put together?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. And if you don't mind, if I can interrupt on -- on one point, or just clarify, I believe in 2009 -- 2009, 2010, we had also began a partnership with another bank, Irving Trust Bank, in terms of offering a line of credit product. I believe it was called Elastic with Irving Trust Bank. So it was a similar type of structure and relationship but a different product, different bank in -- I'm going to guess, late 2009, end of 2010.

MR. SCHEFF: Lacks foundation. A. No, you're -- I'll answer the question. No, you're not right in that statement. To my knowledge, the FDIC never told the bank to stop originating the ThinkCash product. but my understanding was what was communicated to 24 First Bank of Delaware had decided on their own to 25 stop originating the ThinkCash installment loan

A. I would say, from my perspective, as executives, we're always evaluating new product innovations. As I mentioned earlier, you know, sometime in late 2009, 2010 we had rolled out a line of credit product where we partnered with Irving Trust Bank and them rolling out a line of credit product.

So there was always discussions related to new products going on. I do recall, you know, in the fall of 2010 -- because first it was Irving Trust Bank in August of 2010, and then subsequently First Bank of Delaware later -- a few months later, you know, both informing us that -- that they had chosen on their own to no longer, you know, originate their products by the end of 2010.

So we, as an executive team -- I don't know when the meeting happened, whether it was on a weekend or just during the normal course of -- it would have been the fall of 2010, you know, got together to continue to strategize on what other, you know, new products, opportunities we could do.

I know, for instance, one of the things we looked at was -- at the time, there was a lot of online lending happening in the UK. So, you know, we -- that was certainly something we considered.

Q. Right. So whoever -- whoever made the decision, however that happened, on the First Bank of Delaware end, it was communicated to Ken Rees that the bank was no longer going to be buying -was no longer going to be originating loans as of the end of 2010. That's what you remember?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Yes, what I recall being informed of was sometime in late fall of -- of 2010, that the bank had informed -- "the bank" probably being Alonzo as the CEO -- had informed Ken Rees that effective December 31, 2010 -- or really effective January 1, 2011, that the bank would no longer originate ThinkCash installment loans. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And there was some earlier testimony about an executive offsite in either the end of October, beginning of November 2010, where the executives gathered to begin to figure out what the next move for Think Finance would be with regard to the installment loan product; am I right?

1 And we ultimately did, I do recall, going out in 2 November of 2010, and we ended up acquiring a small 3 entity that did online lending and completed that 4 transaction by the end of 2010. 5

We looked at a rent-to-own product. We looked at a prepaid card product. There were a variety of products we were looking in that time, as well as just, you know, figuring out -- or looking at, you know, other installment-type products as well as, you know, what we could continue to do as a direct lender.

Q. At this point in time, the installment loan product was the biggest revenue source for the company; am I right?

- A. As -- as CEO of -- when I've worked with Ken CEO, yes, he is involved in the strategic decisions of the company, and he involves a lot of us other executives as well. Not all of the ideas are his. He's open. But he's definitely involved from a strategy standpoint of running the company. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- Q. Now, what do you remember about the -- so we know that by the spring of 2011, there were tribal contracts in place. Right? Right?

MR. HERMAN: Objection; form.

- A. By the spring of 2011, we had entered into agreements as the service provider for one tribe that I'm aware of, the Chippewa Cree.

 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- Q. Right. And that eventually became three tribes, right?
- A. Eventually, we entered into agreements with two additional tribes during the -- that same two-thousand-and -- time -- time span with the Otoe-Missouria, I believe in, roughly, I'm going to

- there was a variety of ways that we could use the marketing and technology skills that we possessed to
- 6 either do direct lending or to partner with other
- 7 third-party lenders, whoever they may be.
- 8 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. Well, at some point a decision was made to pursue a tribal partner during this period, the end of 2010; am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

- A. I can't recall if it was -- and by -- we were certainly exploring partnering with tribes in the fall of 2010 into the spring of -- spring, first quarter of 2011.
- 17 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- Q. As the CFO, were you the -- I assume you were involved in the communications with Victory Park during this period of time?
 - A. Well, I'm always involved in the -- in the discussions as CFO with -- with Victory Park, typically, on a once-a-month basis to at least report the financial performance.
 - I would have been involved in the guess, the July, August 2011 time span, and then we also entered into service provider agreements with the Tunica-Biloxi tribe in, roughly, the September, October, November 2011 time span.

Q. Right. So what I focus on is the -- is the process going on within the company, between the time you learned that -- that there would be no more originations by the bank, and -- and the identification of tribal partners, I mean, first there had to have been a decision to -- to explore the tribal option, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. You remember that happening?MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. My understanding -- and I wasn't actively involved. I mean, some of this even predates me. I think tribal lending had gone on prior to -- not with us, but there had been tribal lending, you know, as far back prior to 2007. And it's quite possible that the company had looked at it then.

So, I mean, that's -- you know, it was one form of, you know, for lack of a better term, regulatory distribution diversification, similar to we can be a direct lender, we can partner with

- A. Well, but your question was, you know, do I talk. I talk to them about a variety of things.
- Q. I understand. But I really want to -- I really want to talk about the development of the tribal products. And so do you remember

A. I recall two conversations vaguely. The first was with Ken Rees, the CEO, sometime in probably the fall of 2010 just saying that, you

8 also -- it's great if we can find a third-party

9 lender, whoever that may be, bank, tribe, other

10 licensed third-party lender, to offer services to,

but from my perspective, you know, whoever we end up discussing with Ken Rees that if we do explore tribal -- if we do explore -- you know, if we enter official title is. But just saying, you know -again, reiterating how the bank hasn't changed its mind, you know, they're still going to stop originating the installment loans effective January 1, 2011.

You know, one of the things that we are --"we," ThinkCash, Think Finance -- are looking at is offering our services to third-party tribes, tribal lenders: Would you be interested in providing funding liquidity for purchasing participations from, whether it be installment loans or lines of credit, that tribes would originate?

Q. And do you remember in that conversation or in subsequent conversations with Victory Park, them sharing with you their -- their own experience with other service providers that were in deals with Indian tribes?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

MR. SHAPIRO: Object to form.

20 A. I don't recall having a conversation with 21 them or them bringing up any expertise that they had 22 in doing that. Whether they were looking at it at 23 the time, I don't know. I don't recall.

24 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. So before a tribe was identified, I assume

Page 106

If we enter into a service relationship with a tribe before finalizing that agreement, we need to work with the tribe and make sure that either Victory Park Capital or some other third-party lender is going to be comfortable providing lending funds into an SPV to purchase participations from the tribe. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And what's the other conversation you remember?

A. The second conversation is after I just reminded him that, you know, this as great as our -as great as our services are and we can find all the, you know, third-party originators in the world, if you can't find somebody to buy the -- you know, buy a large amount of the participations, you know, you really don't have a product to offer or a service to provide because they're not going to be able to originate the loans.

So then shortly thereafter, as we became more interested in potentially finalizing a deal with the tribes, I remember a call that Ken and I had with, I believe, Richard Levy at Victory Park Capital. Richard, I think, for lack of a better term, is the head CEO. I'm not sure what his as CFO you would have -- you would have had to start conceptualizing how the program would work if you

3 were successful in identifying a tribe and if

4 Victory Park was willing to provide the 5 participation funding. Am I right?

> A. Actually, no, I would disagree with that statement. Really, what we, as a service provider, felt comfortable with was the structure, kind of replicating the same existing structure that we had in place with First Bank of Delaware and with Irving Trust Bank. We felt that that had gone through numerous regulatory exams.

From our perspective, my perspective, as I recollect, the FDIC never formally told either of those banks: No, you cannot, you know, originate these types of loans under the structure.

As I mentioned earlier, I felt that a lot of the changes that we had made as the program, with the First Bank of Delaware, in particular, evolved, it came at the recommendation of the FDIC.

So as the CFO, you know, what I remember communicating to Ken and the other execs is I literally believe that from an accounting perspective, we could replicate the existing structure as we go to work tribal lenders or even

I do recall that one of the tribes in late 2010, early 2011, that we were considering partnering with was the Otoe-Missouria tribe. BY MR. ACKELSBERG: Q. And when you were having discussions with them, your discussions were actually with an intermediary organization led by someone named Mark Curry, right? MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. BY MR. Yes, I believe in the fourth quarter of 2010, as we started to think about, you know, how to brand and I wasn't actively involved, but I remember as an executive because it would have been presented, like, at the weekly executive meeting that there was probably a presentation where if we're going to partner with a third-party tribe and I believe at the time probably one of the first ones we looked at was the Otoe-Missouria. But regardless, whoever it was, the initial branding concept was Great Plains Lending, you know, because we did not want to we couldn't use ThinkCash. That belonged to First Bank of Delaware. Couldn't use whatever the product name was with Irving Trust Bank. So we had to, as marketer, come up with a potential brand name that whatever tribe we ended up partnering with, you know, would adopt and agree to. BY MR. ACKELSBERG: Q. Okay. And eventually eventually, though, the initial the initial the initial contract was the actual contract signed signed

A. I'll rephrase that question. I mean, from my perspective, the first tribe that we began providing services to was the Chippewa Cree, and I believe that would have been in the April two-thousand- -- May 2011 time span.

Q. Okay. And do you remember the reasons for the switch from the -- the Otoe-Missouria to the -to the Chippewa Cree?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. No, that -- I wasn't involved in those discussions.

20 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

> Q. The -- so with -- there was this existing customer portfolio at ThinkCash from the ThinkCash product, right?

A. I would not say that they were necessarily that's a term you've heard of, hasn't -- isn't it? MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Yes. I mean, we -- we use that metric throughout the company in terms of, you know, when we define a new customer, it's, you know, kind of what it says, a loan to -- you know, a first-time loan to a new customer. That does not specifically mean -- because we're a lot of times providing the reporting to third-party, you know, banks or other lenders.

If we used "customer," it doesn't necessarily mean that it's our customer. It's a generic term to reply from a reporting standpoint whether we as the direct lender, it would be truly a first-time loan to our new customer, or if we were the service provider to a bank, to a tribe or some other third-party lender, the term "new customer," if we use it on our own reports, it's to help them identify that from their perspective, it's a new customer, not necessarily to imply that it's technically our customer. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

O. So the --

A. And -- I'm sorry, let me finish, because the second part of your question was former.

1 our customers. They were the bank's customers. The 2 bank had originated the loans to those customers.

We just provided third-party services to the bank to help them originate those loans.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And am I also -- so is it correct that in any -- in any of the products, any of the Think's products, whether it's service provider product, the direct lending product, the existing customers are viewed as potential customers for future -- future loans?

A. I don't recall specifically, you know, whether in the marketing agreements we, you know, inserted legal to -- you know, legal language that gave us the right to potentially market -- you know, if we offered marketing services to some other third-party originator. I don't -- I don't really -- that's not really a financial matter. It's more of a marketing matter to me.

Q. I'm sorry, I mean, I thought -- I thought you were kind of more involved than maybe you are. But I've been immersed in all of this material for months, and one of the things that I have seen is a distinction between new and existing customers or new and former customers or things -- that's --

A former customer would imply that that would be a customer that had already paid off their -- their loan either directly to us if we were the direct lender or to the third-party originating bank or third-party tribe if they were the originating lender, and then that third-party originator or us turned around and made a second loan to the customer.

Q. Now, you're aware, are you not, that Think -- ThinkCash customers, when it was still First Bank of Delaware, if they wanted former customers, if they wanted to return and get another loan, they could just log onto the website and apply for another loan, right? That's -- that's the way the platform -- the platform allowed that; am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. It gets a little bit outside of my expertise because I'm not really that familiar with the customer flow from a website design and -- and whatnot. But I guess maybe rephrase the question. What you're trying to ask me to really answer is, is that is it -- rephrase the question. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. At the end of 2010, it was a matter of some

Because, like I said, regardless of whether it was a bank or a tribe or other third-party lender, I know that it's almost kind of common sense in financial services that nobody really can retain, you know, a hundred percent on their balance sheet and they're always looking to, you know, offload, securitize some -- some large 20 21 participation in those loans.

22 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

> Q. You testified previously that First Bank of Delaware supplied its own funds for purposes of 25 originating the loans, right?

Q. Do you -- do you remember the company doing 6 any due diligence on either of the tribes with regard to their history or experience with online

8 lending?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

10 A. I don't recall. I don't recall that, no.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

O. I mean --

A. I specifically did not do any due diligence on the Chippewa Cree or the Otoe-Missouria in terms of looking -- I mean, they're privately -- private entities, tribes. So I'm not sure that I had access to any of that. And, frankly, just from my perspective, based on the fact that they had existing lending relationships, I assumed that they had access to capital.

Q. Well, it's not unusual for Think to do due diligence on potential counterparties, right? I mean, that happens all the time, doesn't it?

23 24 MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. I would actually say that during my time at

Page 126

- A. Yes, I -- well, what I testified was, is
- 2 that when you said capital, I assume that they came
- 3 up and by "own funds," they could have gone out and
- 4 borrowed funds from somebody else, deposits that
- 5 they -- you know, use their deposit base. That's,
- 6 in essence, borrowing funds from third-party
- 7 depositors, or it could have been their own capital,
- 8 their own excess cash flow. So when you used the
- 9 term "capital," I said they came up with the
- 10 liquidity either in the form of debt or capital
- 11 to -- to originate their loans.
 - Q. What -- what was your understanding of what the source of the initial capital would be for either the Otoe-Missouria or the Chippewa Cree that Think was talking to in this period of time?
- 16 A. Well, I knew through third-party
 - conversations that both of those tribes had existing
- 18 lending relationships that -- outside of us; that
- 19 the Chippewa Cree was doing some type of this online
- 20 lending with some other third-party service
- 21 provider; and that I knew, even though I had never
- 22 directly met Mark Curry, that the Otoe-Missouria was 23
- offering, again, some type of online lending product 24 and kind of partnering with Mark Curry and whatever
- 25 his entity was called at the time.

Page 128

- 1 Think Finance, I did not do -- now, granted, the
 - relationship with First Bank of Delaware was already
- 3 established, but I didn't do due diligence on First
- 4 Bank of Delaware even, you know, on a quarterly
- basis looking at their call reports. And the same 5
- 6 with Irving Trust Bank. So, no, at least from my
- 7 perspective as CFO, I never really did any due
 - diligence on third-party originating lenders.
 - BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- 10 Q. Well, particularly, if they're -- they're 11 banks and they're regulated entities, you've got to 12 assume there's something bona fide about it, right,
 - I mean, if they're -- if they're banks?
 - MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.
- 15 A. Your question was whether I did any due 16 diligence and my answer -- on third-party
 - originating banks or lenders, and my answer is, no,
- 18 I didn't.
- 19 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
- 20 Q. Okay. Do you know if anybody did any due 21 diligence on the Chippewa Cree or the
 - Otoe-Missouria?

The folks -the people with the tribe that we met with were the tribal lending council and CEO, COO of their tribal lending operation. And we also, I believe, met with a few of the other just tribal council members in addition to tribal lending council.

customer loan agreements? No. Did I see actual customers? No. It's an online lending entity.

Q. And did -- and, again, from -- we're talking about 2011, the original deal with -pertaining to Plain Green, did Victory Park have a blanket security interest on the assets of Think Finance?

MR. SHAPIRO: Object to form.

A. Yes. As -- as I just mentioned, as part of the structure with GPLS, because they were now a sophisticated, you know, lender, they, like any other one, we had a lending relationship with Silver Park -- Silver Point Capital, as I talked about earlier, you know, have a lien on the assets of the that obligation that Think had?

A. It was just -- as I just mentioned, it was to -- in addition to having the blanket lien on the other assets -- because when you look at a credit default swap type of situation -- which is, again, what we had between TCAS and GPLS -- on a monthly basis, if there's, as I mentioned earlier, excess net income at the end of the month, we were entitled to that. Under the credit default swap, that money would be moved over to TCAS. But then, technically speaking, we could move that money from TCAS to our parent company, to a PayDay One entity, to any entity for general corporate purposes.

But Victory Park Capital -- and I get this -- like any, you know, SPV-type structure would be nervous that, well, really their agreement is only between TCAS and them. So as TCAS is, you know, collecting premiums on the credit default swap, if they're turning around and moving that money out of TCAS to another Think Finance legal entity, TCAS, theoretically, could not have any

And then suddenly -- if TCAS owed money to GPLS because the loans went bad, then suddenly they're a little bit more naked because -- and so

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. The lien that Victory Park had, though, was a senior lien that trumped -- that trumped other liens; am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. MR. SHAPIRO: Object to form. A. Well, at that point in time, we didn't have any other debt relationship with any other third-party lender, so it -- it was really standalone. It was senior to nothing else. We had nothing else -- and, really, the essence of that was to provide, you know, additional collateral support

14 for the equivalent of the credit default swap

15 between TCAS and GPLS.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And another form of collateral was -required minimum investment by Think in GPLS; am I right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that's referred to as LTV?

A. Yes, when you use the term "LTV," I would -- I think it's an acronym for "loan to 24 value."

Q. And so what was the nature of that -- of hence the reason for having kind of the lien and the corporate guarantee, but then also the reason why

3 they would want us to kind of collateralize part of

4 that credit default swap, you know, to kind of 5 create similar to what we had shown on that earlier

6 slide, you know, a buffer between, you know, the 7 normal cash flows that typically exceed. But in the 8 event that there was a hiccup and losses, you know,

9 they were requested and we were comfortable 10

providing, you know, kind of a reserve, so to speak, to kind of collateralize the credit default swap.

Q. And the way that functioned is that -- is that you, as the CFO, would have to monitor the size of the GPLS holding and -- and might have to, for example, increase the investment that Think -- you would have to monitor the -- the extent of the Think investment on a monthly basis as it related to the total GPLS fund; am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. From my perspective, what that reserve or investment required was similar to any other type of traditional kind of credit default swap or, you know, arrangement in terms of as the assets of GPLS increased, meaning the participations purchased from the various tribes, it seemed reasonable, yes, that

we would have to increase the size of our kind of collateral -- collateralizing part of our credit default swap obligation to GPLS.

Conversely, if in -- you know, in this particular industry, there's a seasonality aspect, typically during Q1, customers, you know, related to the loans get tax refunds and use -- in the right way, you know, use a lot of the tax refund to pay down -- pay down or pay off their loans with the third-party lenders, which would then also reduce the amount of assets in GPLS. We would -- at that point, would also be able to reduce the size of our credit default swap collateral obligation. So it went up and down, and you're right, we did monitor it on a monthly basis.

Q. And when -- and when sales were up, that would mean that the way that would work would be, what you're describing as a reserve, you would actually have to purchase a share -- purchase shares in that amount in GPLS. Isn't that the way it would

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. The way it worked was that, yes, when we put money in, we technically invested in GPLS but Finance, Inc., and we've got $5 million in that.

- 2 Well, because of the -- the security agreement
- 3 between GPLS and Think Finance, Inc., you know, in
 - the event that TCAS defaulted on the credit default
- 5 swap obligation and GPLS couldn't be made whole
- 6 from, you know, the investment reserve concept where
- 7 we had put money in, that they would have the right
- 8 to then go to whoever our bank was with the parent
- 9 company under the deposit account control agreement
- 10 and say: Hey, Think Finance/TCAS is in default on
- this credit default swap obligation, you know, we 11
- 12 want to be able to, for lack of a better term,
- 13 freeze or take control of the parent company cash 14 account.

15 So my understanding is really the DACA 16 really is only effective, you know, in the event of 17 default where we don't have the ability to remediate

19 Q. But it gives them a remedy with --20 specifically with regard to bank accounts, right?

- that Victory Park, having, lack of a better term,
- 2 ownership or control of the GPLS entity, would have
- 3 the right to that. But, yes, we would buy a share
- 4 like any other third-party investor that VPC allowed
- 5 into the GPLS entity.
 - BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. And there also were in place things called DACAs; am I right? You know what a -- DACA, that's a deposit account control agreement?
- 10 A. Yes.
- 11 Q. Okay. And a -- and a DACA is, effectively, 12 a security interest on a bank account, right?
- 13 MR. SHAPIRO: Object to form.
 - BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. It works like that?
 - MR. SHAPIRO: Same objection.
 - MR. SHELDON: Object to form.
- 18 A. Say that one more time. And I apologize.
- 19 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. Fine. What's a DACA?
- 21 A. From my perspective, a DACA is -- is -- I'm
- 22 trying to think of how it would apply to the GPLS --
- 23 well, let's -- between GPLS and us, that we would 24 have nonTCAS bank accounts. So let's say that we
- 25 have a bank account at our parent company, Think

Page 147

- Q. And that -- and there also were DACAs with
- 2 regard to the -- to the tribal -- well, let's stick
- 3 with -- let's stick with Plain Green. With regard
- 4 to the Plain Green funding account and collection
- 5 account, in other words, the accounts that were used
- 6 in the -- in the funding and collecting of loans; am 7
- 8 A. The way the DACAs worked with Plain Green
- 9 and GPLS is because -- and I'll just use Plain
- 10 Green, but it was similar with Great Plains Lending 11 and similar with Mobiloans lending and those tribes.
- 12 Is that as the originating lender, the tribe was
- 13 responsible for, you know, funding all of the -- a
- 14 hundred percent of the customer loans, and then two
- 15 to three days later, they would sell a participation
- 16 interest into the GPLS fund.
- 17 When a customer made a payment on the
- 18 loans, a hundred percent of the customer payments
- 19 went into a Plain Green collections account, and
- 20 Plain Green would then be responsible for -- and
- 21 forgive me, I don't know whether it happened same
- 22 day or next day, but be responsible. And we, as
- 23 TCAS, part of our accounting -- and I know that
- 24 you've previously deposed Linda Rogenski and Linda 25 Callnin, but that's part of their responsibility

37 (Pages 145 to 148)

was, you know, ensuring that the tribes, you know, were moving, you know, 90 percent of the collections from the Plain Green collection account to the GPLS collection account.

So my understanding in that kind of situation, the DACA would be there to help enforce that if for some reason the Chippewa Cree and the Plain Green, you know, collection account wasn't properly remitting, you know, the money under the participation agreement the 90 percent of the collection to the GPLS, that VPC would have the right to go to the Plain Green bank and say, hey, they're in default under our participation agreement, you know, we have the right to get our 90 percent.

Q. Yeah, and I appreciate you saving us some time in saying that this was true of Great Plains Lending and Mobiloans, that that -- that these features with regard to the relationship between Think Finance and VPC, it really -- it -- there really wasn't a difference tribe by tribe except as to the amount of the revenue share; am I -- am I right?

Q. Well, but those -- the TailWind and Decision Science fees, that was standard across all three of the tribes; am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. Yeah, I -- I don't recall whether we charged each tribe the same marketing fee or -- or licensing fee. It's quite possible and reasonable, but at the same time I would also say that we would have the right to make them different if we so chose. If some reason we were incurring more marketing expense to, you know, attract customers to the Tunica-Biloxi Mobiloans product, we would have the right, if we so chose, to change the marketing fee between us and them to increase that fee. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. But if we wanted to know whether there were differences in the fees or they were the same, we would just look at the respective marketing and servicing and licensing agreements, right?

A. Yes. I mean, you know, we had separate marketing agreements between us, our TailWind entity and each of the three tribes. And the same with the TC Decision Sciences entity.

24 Q. Right.

A. So -- and as I said, I don't recall if they

Page 150

- 1 kind of, like, a master SPV that was created in a
- 2 way that VPC would be the primary lender into that
- 3 SPV. Theoretically, they could allow other lenders
- 4 into that SPV if they so chose. But, yes, that that
- 5 GPLS master SPV was buying participations from
 - multiple tribal entities, not just one.
- 7 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. Yeah.
 - A. And that was done more for probably just ease overall. I mean, it's easier for us to, you know --
 - Q. I would think so.
 - A. For them to manage one and for us to move money back and forth between one and three tribes rather than to have. . .
 - Q. Right. I understand.

But I'm also right, though, that there was one difference tribe to tribe, and that is the amount of the revenue share?

A. Yes, because, I mean, each tribe was a separate relationship between -- each tribal lending was a separate relationship between that particular tribe and GPLS, and even us as the service provider under the marketing agreement and the Decision Sciences agreement, yes.

- were the same. They might have been just for -- for ease. And, generally, the -- the amount of
- marketing and servicing was -- probably cost us the same.
- 5 Q. And with regard to the -- to the
- 6 participation agreements that GPLS had with the 7 three different tribes, there was a difference with
 - regard to the revenue share that GPLS would pay to
- 9 the respective tribal entity; am I right?
- A. As I recall, yes, when I remember looking the -- back in time in looking at those master
- at the -- back in time in looking at those master participation agreements between GPLS and each of the three individual tribes, there -- there probably
- were differences in the revenue profit share.

And he was the counsel for First Bank of paid by Mobiloans -- paid to Mobiloans or Plain 11 11 Delaware as well, right? 12 Green; am I right? 12 A. He was at one point in time, I believe, an 13 MR. SHELDON: Object to form. 13 outside general counsel for -- for First Bank of 14 14 A. My understanding is, yes, the -- the level Delaware. I don't know if he was still at that same 1.5 of profit share being paid by GPLS to Great Plains 15 time. I don't know. 16 Lending was higher than the other two tribes, but my 16 Q. But you don't know if he was representing 17 understanding, also, was that the average APR and --17 Plain Green? 18 was higher for that Great Plains Lending product 18 A. I don't remember if he was representing 19 because it was viewed as a slightly riskier customer 19 Plain Green in their initial discussions with this. 20 base that they were targeting. The Otoe-Missouria 20 Q. Okay. So just as you did an early trip 21 was a slightly riskier customer than what Plain 21 personally, you were part of the Think delegation to 22 Green would have been originating to or what Tunica 22 Box Elder, you were also --23 23 through Mobiloans would have been originating to. A. I'm smiling because I -- I forgot the name 24 So I think that's probably the reason why 24 of the city right there, but yeah. 25 Great Plains received a higher profit share was 25 Q. I know. You stayed in a motel in Havre,

1 because the APR, in general, was higher. It was a 2 riskier customer. So GPLS, with their 90 percent, 3 would have been probably receiving more revenue, on 4 average, potentially, per customer, so they were 5 willing to give more profit share to Great Plains. 6 BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 7

Q. And the -- so that would have been really part of the -- those initial negotiations that you weren't a part of; am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. The -- the participation agreements -- I mean, really, the participation agreements between GPLS and each of the three tribes, yes, I wasn't directly, you know, involved in. But, yeah, whoever was negotiating those agreements certainly would have negotiated those terms.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

- Q. And you don't -- you don't recall who was negotiating for Plain Green, right? I think you told us that before.
- A. Yeah, yeah, I don't recall who negotiated on behalf of Plain Green.
 - Q. And is the answer the same for Mobiloans?
- 24 A. For Mobiloans, I don't recall. I mean, I
 - recall visiting them on site, along with Jason and -- yeah.

Q. Yeah, right, it is.

You were also part of a delegation precontract with the Tunica-Biloxi?

A. Yeah, the -- the Tunica-Biloxi relationship happened later in 2011. As I recall, they were referred to us by Bob Johnson, who we had partnered with through the Irving Trust Bank agreement. We were interested in offering a line of credit product like we did with Irving Trust -- through Irving Trust Bank.

We were interested in offering a similar type of line of credit product with the tribe, and Bob was aware of the Tunica-Biloxi tribe because --I believe they might be the only African American Indian tribe in the U.S., and Bob, you know, founder of the black entertainment network, heavily involved in, you know, the African American business community had, you know, somehow established a relationship with them up through DC lobbying efforts or whatnot.

But -- you know, and we had kept in touch with Bob after we stopped partnering with Irving Trust Bank. And if I say it was his bank, he technically didn't own all of it, but he was involved in that bank somehow. But, you know, he referred us to them.

And so we had to go out -- "we," Jason, myself, Michelle Nguyen, I believe, went and did a presentation to the Tunica-Biloxi tribe, because unlike the other two, I don't believe that they had an existing online lending product or relationship with any other service provider. So this was new to them. So, you know, Bob encouraged us to go out and make a presentation to their formal tribal council.

- Q. And how -- and what were you suggesting to the Tunica would be their means -- or did you suggest any way that they could fund the loans up front?
- A. The thing that I still recall to this day, I was amazed when we -- when we flew into Tunica-Biloxi, Louisiana, what really struck me was, one, how large their tribal casino was; two, how large their, you know, tribal government office, so to speak, was.

- capital.

 Q. Have the Tunica-Biloxi, over the course of their relationship with Think Finance, ever provided
- the -- the funding capital for the loans originated in the name of Mobiloans?
 - A. I don't recall specifically whether they -they provide the upfront money to originate their loans or whether they were borrowing that from some other third-party entity.
 - Q. Or what about from GPLS?

A. Well, GPLS would -- as part of the structure -- and this makes sense from a tax perspective -- is that the one thing that all of the tribes -- and I think even when you go back to the First Bank of Delaware agreement, from a regulatory perspective, the FDIC, you know, the bank -- the tribes are capital constrained. There's always a concern that what if we originate a hundred percent of the loan, and as part of these master participation agreements, which I'm sure you're aware, you know, at any point in time GPLS can say, no, we choose to no longer purchase participations.

One of the things I always liked about the structure we had with the bank -- banks and the structure with the tribes is that at any one point

And as we were -- we were -- we got there early for the presentation. We were in a separate room kind of like outside of here. And we were sitting in the lobby, and there were two gentlemen across from us with either, like, Goldman Sachs or Credit Suisse, investment bankers, that were pitching another deal to this tribe. And I'm, like,

I remember whispering to Jason that this must be a pretty sophisticated tribe given the size of their casino, which was easily six or seven stories high, hotel casino, and then the fact that there's, you know, investment bankers in the lobby waiting to pitch whatever the next deal happened to be.

So I think maybe -- well, I mean, I was impressed with, you know, their operations. They seemed to be pretty sophisticated. So to your question about whether I was nervous or whatnot about, you know, how they would come up with the capital, clearly not because they -- just based on bumping into investment bankers in their lobby, seeing the size of their operations, even more so than the other two tribes, they seemed to be pretty sophisticated and definitely had access to

- in time, any of the three parties involved could choose to stop being a part of the relationship. At
- any point in time, any of the tribes or the banks
 - could say we choose to no longer originate loans.
- 5 At any point in time as part of the master
- 6 participation agreement, GPLS could say we choose to
- 7 no longer purchase participations. And we, at any
- 8 point in time, as the marketer licensing the
- technology could choose upon whatever the required notice was to say we're no longer going to market
 - notice was to say we're no longer going to market your product or give you our scores.

So what -- what the tribes were concerned about, and the same with the FDIC concern from First Bank of Delaware's perspective is, what happens if you originate the loans a hundred percent and before you can sell them, the 90 percent or 99 percent participation interest to GPLS or the Universal Fund II, what happens if those investors say we're not going to buy anymore? And so there was this concept both with -- I believe with First Bank of Delaware and then also with the tribes, and the tribes in particular -- because you can appreciate, even Tunica, as sophisticated as they are, are probably more capital constrained than your traditional bank -- you know, there -- and the fact that we had also -- I shouldn't say "we." The lawyers had introduced the concept of you've got to wait two or three days -- I think it might be two, maybe three -- from the point --

MR. SHELDON: Let me just put in an objection here and just say to the extent that your answer requires revealing any information that was communicated to you by Think's lawyers or Think's outside counsel, please don't give -- provide that answer. If you have any questions about it, we can step out in the hall. To the extent your answer is just conveying what ended up in a document, you know, please talk about what ended up in a document, not what -- what was communicated to you by Think's in-house or outside counsel. Okay?

A. Okay. Let me just finish the thought. I know this was a little long-winded, but I think it was an important point and that's why I'm taking my time here.

Is that with each of the tribes, for tax purposes, they held on to a hundred percent of the originations of the loans for two to three business days before they sold the participation to the GPLS entity.

As you can appreciate, thousands of account that GPLS set up to serve that function. Am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form; misstates the testimony.

Answer the question if you can.

A. I wouldn't phrase it that way. There was a reserve that if the tribe wanted to use it for originating loans or for other purposes, it had, because it was meant -- capital meant to kind of cover them in the situation that if GPLS stopped buying, that covered the two to three days' worth of loans that -- that they would have originated. Each of the tribes could have had alternative sources for funding the loans. I don't have privy to that information.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well, they could have, but you're -- you're not aware of them ever having -- having supplied any outside funding capital to the funding of Mobiloans loans --

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. -- loans, do you?

A. I'm not aware of -- I just don't -- I don't

Page 162

- customer loans could be originated on a daily basis by each of those tribes. They were concerned that
- they would originate two to three days' worth of
- 4 loan and GPLS would say: We're not going to buy it.
- 5 And, suddenly, they're on the hook for a hundred --6 holding a hundred percent of those loans and being
- 7 capital constrained on a pretty immediate time

8 space.

So what the lawyer -- what the concept was, was to introduce that GPLS would advance two to three days in the form of a reserve that in the event that it said, no, we're not going to buy any more, there was already a reserve to cover the two to three days' worth of loans originated.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

- Q. Okay. That's what I was --
- A. So I'm sorry it was so longwinded, but that's -- I wanted to get that out there. It was really for the -- from my perspective, the tax and the delay in being able to sell same day.
- Q. So I just -- I think I understand your answer.

So I was asking how the loans were funded in the first place, and it sounds like with Mobiloans, the answer was there was a reserve have enough knowledge to answer that question. I don't know.

Q. You sat in, it sounds like, on two -- two sales -- sales visits, one at the Chippewa Cree and one at Mobiloans. You went with Jason and Michelle or people from the product side, right? So this happened twice, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

You can answer the question.

A. From my perspective, I wouldn't call those sales pitches. The Chippewa Cree was not a sales pitch, as I think we discussed earlier. We might have already signed the term sheet or we might have been in the process. It was more of just an onsite visit to meet our business partners.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Do you remember -- do you remember the term -- do you remember the -- you were at the initial Mobiloans trip, though. And I'm wondering, during that trip, do you remember someone on the Think side explaining that the Tunica would not have to lay out any money?

A. I -- I don't -- I was at that presentation.
I don't specifically recall, but it's -- yeah, I don't -- I don't recall specifically. I'm sure what we would have -- would have explained to them is with the reserve concept, that they shouldn't be concerned from a capital perspective that they would be originating loans that they would not be able to sell at least 90 percent participation interest to GPLS.

41 (Pages 161 to 164)

Q. Okay. Thank you.

Do you remember the term "turnkey"?

A. I would not have used it from a finance perspective. So I --

Q. I'm not suggesting it's a financial term. I'm asking whether --

MR. SCHEFF: Let him finish his answer.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. -- you remember the term being used by other members of the team: Michelle or Jason, for example?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. You can answer the question if you can.

A. No, I don't specifically recall.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. You have seen it -- you have seen marketing material where Think's services as a service provider are described as a turnkey, haven't you?

A. From my perspective, things that the tribe would be responsible for besides just originating the loan and, you know, reviewing, you know, the -- the credit decisioning suggestions or scores that we gave them for their approval and understanding, and, you know, the ACH things out of their accounts and all of that stuff, they would be responsible for the -- the customer support and the collections.

We did not handle the collections in any way. We helped provide monitoring services to help them monitor the outsourced customer support and collections, but that ultimately was responsible for the tribes. I'm sure I'm probably forgetting some other operational things, but by no means did we ever provide everything.

MR. ACKELSBERG: I'm going to break very soon. I know we're all hungry. I'm just trying to get to a good cutoff point.
BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. So with Mobiloans, the funding of the loans up front was done through a -- the reserve account, right, that you described?

MR. SHAPIRO: Object to form. MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. That's not how I would phrase my answer.

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. You can answer the question.

A. I would say that from the services we provide, the marketing services, the licensing of the technology, in essence, yes, what we do is turnkey. But there were certainly obligations that the tribes as the originating lender would still be a hundred percent responsible for that we were not involved in at all. So --

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

O. Like what?

MR. SHELDON: Hold on. Can we stop for a second, please? Irv, I realize that you're frustrated with some of the witness's answers and you don't like some of the answers because of your tone and you don't like of the length of answers. But at probably a dozen different points through this deposition already, which is only halfway through, you've cut the witness off. And I'd just ask you to please let the witness finish and wait until the end. The witness is allowed to give the full answer that he believes is necessary for any of your questions. Okay?

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. My question was, like what?

Page 168

There was a reserve account established, like I said previously, to cover the two to three days' worth of originations that they provided. Whether they chose to use some of those funds to help them originate

5 loans or whether they used other third-party

6 capital, I'm not aware of.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:Q. Okay. And the same

- Q. Okay. And the same was true of Great Plains Lending?
 - A. Yes, I believe so.
 - Q. And what about Plain Green?

A. Plain Green, that was the -- as you're aware, the first transaction that we entered into. I don't think the reserve concept was introduced with them. Like I said, I know that they had an existing lending relationship with Encore or whoever. They had other capital means. So, no, there was no reserve -- initial -- initial reserve concept, as I recall. Whether we amended that later, I know that there was suggestions, but I can't recall whether that actually happened.

A. I'll go ahead and answer. Like I said, I wasn't sure exactly, you know, whose idea it was to set the lending relationship this way, you know -you know, us to Haynes, Haynes to Plain Green, or -instead of us directly to Plain Green or Plain Green from someone else. I think -- because I wasn't involved act- -- as I mentioned earlier, actively involved in the discussion. As the CFO, I was more concerned about, you know, the ultimate repayment of any loan, whether it was our loan to Haynes or loan -- corresponding loan to Plain Green.

And so, you know, regardless of how we set it up, in retrospect, what I was comfortable with -or what I was told at the time is, well, one, Havnes introduced us to Plain Green. Haynes has done previous financings with Plain Green. So I think there was a comfort level of -- in terms of providing funds from Think Finance, ultimately, you know, to Plain Green, that it was the preference, my guess, of Haynes and the Plain Green Chippewa Cree tribe to have them have an existing lending relationship, because they had had prior existing lending relationships.

We had met Steven Haynes. I think, from my perspective, as the CFO, even though I didn't --

And, two, I also kind of viewed it as there's two sources of repayment. You know, we're also, you know, clearly entering into a business relationship with the Chippewa Cree Plain Green. So, you know, I know ultimately my first source of repayment is from Haynes, but, you know, he technically is being repaid by Plain Green. So if -- if Haynes doesn't repay us, I can always go to Plain Green, you know, through our relationship, and say, hey, you know, you borrowed from Haynes, and we had lent to Haynes, you owe us since Haynes is reneging on this deal. Q. And do you think it was -- it was largely

Think that drove the decision to structure it this way as opposed to --

A. No, no. Well, I don't recall. I believe it was a comfort level between Plain Green and Haynes, because Plain Green had done business with Haynes before. Appreciate, from their perspective, they had generally never met us before. I mean, you know, I think they felt much more comfortable interacting with Steven. Steven had introduced us to them, is my understanding.

From my perspective, I believe it was a

- 9 court, I would rather end up in court with Steven
- 10 Haynes as an individual than, you know, the Plain

- BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. So you think this might have been actually to provide some sense of security to Think?
 - A. I wouldn't phrase it that way. I said in retrospect, as the CFO, I would be more comfortable lending to Haynes and Haynes lending to the tribe rather than Think Finance lending directly to the tribe, because I would view, again, that in the event that the deal went sideways, two things: One, it's easier for -- I believe easier for us to sue
- 23 or, you know, whatever it takes to get our money
- 24 back from Haynes, than it would be to go through the 25
 - process of trying to get our money back from a

Page 175

- comfortable level that Haynes and Plain Green had with each other that, hey, if we're going to be lending money, have Think lend to Haynes, have
- Haynes lend to Plain Green. That's my belief.
- 5 Q. How -- was this just another cost that was 6 reimbursed, or was -- did this come out of the --
- 7 I'm talking about the -- so the interest cost to the
- 8 tribe, whether -- whether you look at it as getting 9 the money from Think or you're looking at it as
- 10 getting the money from Haynes, the tribe is
- 11 borrowing money at -- what was it, 6 percent? I'm
- 12 trying to remember what -- you know, help me -- help 13 me remember what the terms were.
 - A. Well, let's look at the actual agreement. On page 2, Section 2.3, it says, "The rate of interest will bear at 5 percent per annum," which at
- that time was probably, you know, fair value. 18 Q. And the same 5 percent Think to -- Think to 19 Haynes, right?
 - A. Yeah.
- 21 Q. Yeah. Okay.

22 So what I'm asking is, was that -- we --23 in other depositions we've gone through the whole 24 way that -- that the tribe's expenses were 25 reimbursable through the program.

- A. The program-related expenses?
- Q. Yes. Yes. And would this be considered a program-related expense, that the interest -- the - interest expense under these credit agreements?
- A. Yeah, I -- I don't recall off the top of my
- 6 head. I'm assuming that because these are
- 7 stand-alone credit agreements separate from the
- 8 master participation agreement, which typically
- 9 would handle the reimbursements that are program
- 10 related between the tribe and GPLS, that, no, that
- they wouldn't be subject to that master 11
- 12 participation agreement, that the tribe would be
- 13 responsible for paying 5 percent interest to Haynes
- 14 and Haynes would be responsible for paying 5 percent
- 15 interest to us.

- O. So would then -- and would Think, in its
- 17 distribution to the tribe, then reduce the
- 18 tribe's -- the tribe's program revenue by the amount
- 19 that they owed to -- the amount that they owed under 20
 - this credit facility?
- 21 A. I don't recall whether we netted that as
- 22 just part of, like, a monthly settlement that, hey,
- 23 you know, here's, you know, what you owe -- what you 24 owe us from a marketing standpoint and a licensing
- 25 fee standpoint, and, by the way -- you know, I'm not

- wouldn't actually have to lay that money out; it was really just money in, money out, right? They'd get
- 3 the reimbursement from -- from GPLS, and then the 4
 - money would effectively --
- 5 A. Yeah, I'd probably refer you back to Linda
- 6 Rogenski and Linda Callnin's testimony. But, I
- 7 mean, the way I would have conceptualized it is, is
- 8 that literally on the same day of every month end
- 9 when we kind of settled the month-end books, 10 TailWind would bill Plain Green or the other tribes
- 11 a certain marketing fee. They'd bill them a
- 12 Decision Sciences fee. The tribes would pay that
- 13 full amount, but on that same day, the tribes would
- 14 also be reimbursed by GPLS.
 - So they were gross transactions, because they're individual transactions. We're not netting
- 17 it. But that, you know, it all happened on the same
- 18 day. Because, clearly, I mean, again, the tribes
- 19 are somewhat capital constrained and, you know, the
- 20 marketing fee or the licensing fee could be a pretty
- 21 large dollar amount and they need to be reimbursed
- 22 that same day by 99 percent.
 - Q. And --
- 24 A. So it all happens on the same day. I'm
 - just not sure -- I would not agree that it's all

Page 178

- sure how it eventually got settled, if it was net or
- 2 whether it was gross. 3
 - Q. Well, with regard to for, example, the -the TailWind and the TCDS fees, the tribes never
- 5 paid that, right?
 - MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.
 - A. I'm confused by the question. Can you say that again? You said that they --
 - BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. Well, the tribes never had to actually pay that, right? They would just -- there would be
 - money in from GPLS to pay that bill, and then it
- 12 13 would be paid. It was just money in, money out. It
- 14 was not a -- it was a wash every month. I think we 15
- already went through this. 16 A. No, I don't -- I don't think that's my
 - understanding. My understanding is I think it would have been split 1 percent/99 percent. So the tribe
- 18 19 would have been responsible for settling up on the
- 20 marketing fee directly with TailWind Marketing, the 21 same with TC Decision Sciences. Typically on the
- 22 same day, the tribe would settle with GPLS for 23
- 99 percent of that applicable amount. 24 Q. Right. So -- so at least as to 99 percent
 - of the fees charged by TCDS and TailWind, the tribe

- just kind of netted together. I think there's
- 2 individual transactions that end up netting on the
- 3
 - Q. I see. You read the transcripts for Linda
- 5 Rogenski and Linda Callnin?
 - A. No, I did not.
- 7 Q. Oh, you didn't? Okay.
- 8 A. Sorry.
- 9 Q. And that -- and other expenses that the
- 10 tribes incurred were handled the same way as the --
- 11 as the TailWind and the -- and the TCDS fees; in
- 12 other words, if the tribes incurred program-related
- 13 expenses, like, for example, their legal fees, that
- 14 was reimbursed by GPLS, right? 15
 - MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. A. The -- the expenses that would be
- 17 reimbursed by GPLS to Plain Green or to any of the
- 18 other two tribes would either have been directly
- 19 outlined in the master participation agreement, or
- 20 in the event that, for some reason, that master
- 21 participation agreement was somewhat ambiguous as to
- 22 whether the expense should be reimbursed, there
- 23 would probably be separate phone calls, whatnot, 24
 - related to agreeing to whether or not it ended up being reimbursed. So, I mean, I'm sure there was --

Page 181 Page 183 between yourself, various people from either Victory 1 BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 1 2 Q. Phone calls to who? 2 Park or Katten, right? 3 A. I would say phone calls probably between 3 A. didn't have this concept of the GPLS, you know, 1 2 reserve to kind of protect against the two to three 3 days of originations. And so with -- and I think it

And I liked it for -- for one main reason, from my perspective, as the corporate CFO of overall Think Finance, with the Plain Green deal, we were lending money out of our corporate cash availability to Haynes. Haynes was lending that to Plain Green. I think that's what these agreements encompass.

Under the other two deals with Otoe-Missouria and Tunica, the GPLS reserve, because it was -- they were provided in case the tribes -you know, GPLS decided, as we talked about before, to stop purchasing, the tribes could use that to originate the loans. That was money coming from Victory Park Capital or other investors in GPLS.

And so by -- the main reason why I was talking with Rick, who, at that point was then representing Plain Green, I said: I liked what you came up with with the Tunica deal. You know, we'd love to have GPLS create this two- to three-day reserve and have Plain Green use that to kind of

A. I think it's because the --MR. SCHEFF: You've got to wait until he finishes.

A. I apologize. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

> Q. Well, it's just -- I think you hear it. I mean, whether -- what does the CFPB have to do with the -- with the Haynes deal? Why would considerations regarding the CFPB enter into the decision about Haynes?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form; compound question.

You can answer whatever question you choose.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

O. You can answer the second one.

A. As I recall, at the time, that is when the tribes, as well as, I think, us, received a CID, civil investigative demand, from the CFPB, well, right around what we would label kind of a fishing expedition where they wanted a lot of information related to the tribal programs. I think we received -- the tribes and us received that right around that time.

So assuming Rick was just saying: Hey, we cover their capital needs, so to speak, and we then get repaid out of that amount. The tribe would repay Haynes and Haynes would repay us, and that frees up my corporate cash for any reason.

4 5 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Good. Okay.

A. So from my perspective, it was kind of a return of capital to Think Finance.

MR. ACKELSBERG: All right. Some more e-mails on the same topic let's have you look at. This is 247.

(Exhibit No. 247 marked.)

A. (Reviews document.)

Okay. This is, like, one or two-weeks later it looks like from the prior e-mail.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Yeah. Yeah. And you're -- it looks like you're still trying to push this. And then you get a response from Rick Eckman on June 19th, "We should think about doing this in light of the CFPB CID."

Do you remember any connection, like, what -- do you understand what this has to do with a -- with the CF- -- why there would be some decision -- why the CFPB CID would play any role in the decision of whether to change the Haynes -- just got this notice from the CFPD, that the -- the CFPB, that they're interested in, you know, all of this stuff. He's representing Plain Green, and so I'm sure they probably, from his perspective, just wanted time to kind of digest exactly what was exactly going on with that CID request.

Q. But do you know why he thought that taking Haynes out and using the reserve concept would -would be a good idea in light of the CFPB's action?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form; mischaracterizes the document.

You can answer the question.

A. Yeah, I'll answer the question. I don't think that's -- my interpretation of this e-mail chain, that's not what he was getting at at all. It was, as I just said: Hey, we just got -- my tribe just got a CID. Before we amend anything, whether it's Haynes or anything else, we need time to sit down legally and think about, you know, what the CFPB just issued to us. That's where I'm coming from with this. That's my interpretation of this e-mail chain.

(Exhibit No. 248 marked.) BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Look at 248. It's later in the year. It's

And so you're in conversation with --3 But, I mean, what you -- what you say here is you 4 4 would pay or reimburse. So the idea is that this again, with Mr. Tauber and Mr. Eckman, and you're 5 saying that we finally figured out a way to get TF 5 would be a -- basically, a program expense that 6 6 from lending money to Haynes who then lends money to would be reimbursed by GPLS; isn't that what you 7 7 PGL. I stand corrected. But -- so whoever it is that's paying the 14 A. Can I have one minute to read it? 14 15 1.5 reimbursement, it -- so before Think Finance was O. Oh, sure. 16 A. Because when I stepped outside, I didn't 16 providing money at 5 percent to Haynes, who was then 17 have a -- I just. . . 17 providing money at 5 percent to Think, to -- to 18 (Reviews document.) 18 Plain Green? 19 19 A. Can I reverse that? Haynes would be paying Okay. 20 Q. So we before looked at the original credit 20 us 5 percent and the tribe would be paying Haynes 21 facility agreements, and it was for 5 percent money 21 5 percent. You made it sound like we were paying 22 loaned by Haynes to Plain Green and then 5 percent 22 Q. I'm sorry, you're -- it's late in the day, 23 23 Think Finance lending money to Haynes, right? 24 A. That's correct. 24 and you're absolutely right. 25 Q. All right. So at this point, it looks like 25 The other thing that I'm trying to Page 194 Page 196 1 what's being contemplated, this -- this thing that 1 understand, the other change, is that that 5 percent 2 2 you figured out, is still going to be you lending is now going to become 15 percent, that the tribe 3 money to some intermediary who would then lend money 3 would now be charged 15 percent by this entity and 4 to the tribe, only here instead of it being Haynes, 4 that Think Finance would reimburse the tribe for it would be some investment fund that he would --5 5 that expense. Why in the world was this being --6 that he would put together, right? I mean, that's 6 being discussed at this time? 7 one change; am I right? 7 A. Can I explain now? Okay. Because this --8 MR. And under that concept, if -- theoretically, VPC would probably have to lend more money into GPLS to now cover the two to three days' worth of originations. And remember, on the credit default swap -- and this is where it will start to make sense now -- you know, we're paying, you know, VPC, GPLS, I am going to guess, 18 to 20 percent.

You know, they get a fixed return, and that comes

So, in essence, by -- under my concept in that previous e-mail, we're going to have to pay -- not "we," but it reduces our credit default premium by, roughly, 18 to 20 percent for the amount that they're putting in to do this.

What Haynes came back and proposed in this e-mail, and I think it was a way for Mr. Haynes to also continue to profit off of the arrangement, was he said: I can go out and find -- rather than doing that concept, Chris, I can go out and find a group of investors, put together a fund, raise 10- to

Q. Of course.

A. Thank you.

10 (Reviews document.)

Okay.

Q. So you see this is an e-mail exchange between you and Michelle Nguyen in January of 2013, and -- and you see in the middle where Michelle asks you, "Is Eckman representing PG or Haynes?" Do you see that?

17 A. Yes, I do.

Q. And your answer to her was that, "He is representing Haynes." Do you see that?

Haynes and Haynes can repay you, but I am going to have to promise my investors some type of fixed return. But it was going to be lower than what GPLS's fixed return was.

So from an economic standpoint, I think, at that point in time, as I recollect, I told
Steven: Well, if you can go out and, you know, raise 10- to $15 million that would lend money to the tribe to give them the working capital that they need to continue to originate loans and cover the reserve and all this and that, and if I can get VPC comfortable with them doing that, I ultimately end up getting my capital back, which is what I wanted from Haynes; and, two, it would actually be at a slightly cheaper cost to me than if VPC put in and created the reserve.

Q. I've got it.

A. Because VPC -- so that's why. Now, if -- I'll end my answer there.

Q. No, I --

Q. I've noticed a lot of -- that there's a lot of documents that -- in the production with -- with regard to outreach to banks. In fact, there were -there were board members, I think you said, that were involved, Mr. Johnson. Alonzo Primus was actually involved in looking for banks. Am I right?

A. Yes. Yes, as I recollect, he was.

Q. How did he reappear on the scene?

A. That's a good question. I'm not sure. I did not contact him directly. He might have reached out. As I recall -- and I may be wrong in this, but as I recall, I think he had somehow hooked up with Steven Haynes in regards to knowing. And it was probably through Steven and Alonzo's experience, you know, being in this space and operating First Bank of Delaware, I think they had mutual connections into certain ACH processors, whatnot. So. . .

secondary, you know, other lending program besides

And I know that the Tunica-Biloxi tribe. along with Mobiloans, in particular Marshall Perot, I believe is how you pronounce his last name, or Perot, who was on the Mobiloans lending board and was actively involved in Washington and was an African American as well, was actively reaching out to potential minority-owned banks as well.

So all three were actively involved. All three understood the importance because they needed, you know, ACH processors and banks to process the loans that they were originating and to process the collections for the portfolio that was already outstanding. So it was a combined effort.

Q. Okay. Thank you. MR. ACKELSBERG: Let's look at 259. (Exhibit No. 259 marked.)

Okay.

Q. So you see this is in the same period,

24 A. Yeah.

Q. Okay.

Q. So one thing I haven't noticed in the production is any involvement of any tribal members in any of these conversations with regard to ACH providing -- providers. Do you recall the tribes ever being involved in any of this -- in this search?

A. Yes, I do. I mean, one, besides just frequently updating him on the status, all three tribes were involved to some extent, based upon my recollection. Some where I had direct conversations, probably not e-mail but direct conversations, and some that I just was aware of tangentially.

For instance, I know the Plain Green Chippewa Cree tribe, at one point, they had hired their exbanker from Wells Fargo, Tim -- I forget what his last name is -- McInerney, or something like that. He was certainly, you know, being an exbanker, actively involved trying to understand are there locals banks in the Montana region that might be able to process the ACH transactions for the Chippewa Cree Plain Green operation.

I know that the Otoe-Missouria, along with Mark Curry, were actively looking for ACH processors, especially since they had their

1 A. It's a little bit later, I believe, than 2 some of the other e-mails.

O. Right. So still in the ACH crisis?

A. I would characterize it as it was getting close to the height of Operation Choke Point, yes.

Q. And we haven't mentioned this, but there was another issue going on, as I recall. During this period of time, there was -- there was a lawsuit filed by the New York state banking regulator challenging the legality of the program; am I right?

A. I don't know if I would characterize it that way. I thought that the attorney general in New York had issued, like, a broad blanketed statement asking banks not to process ACH transactions for these certain industries.

Q. You don't remember a cease and desist from the New York banking regulator?

A. No. Like I said, I mean, maybe that was what I meant by a broad blanketed statement, but I don't remember the specific lawsuit by the AG.

Q. Okay. So August 19, 2013, you're writing to Tom Welch and Richard Levy with a cc to Ken. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

formers. No. 2, we stop all loan fundings through the end of the year for tribal, new and formers.

We'll see what type of cash balances that drives."

Am I right that the context for this e-mail is that Victory Park had already told you that they were thinking of pulling the plug on GPLS?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. I'll answer the question. But, no, that's -- that's not how I would characterize it. Really, it's what Tom, I believe, references at the top part of the e-mail chain. The real ask here is to see how quickly we can get to 136 million of cash in GPLS, which is 50 percent. So I'm assuming that GPLS probably had, roughly, 272 million of funding into -- or VPC had 272 million of funding into GPLS.

And so what they were asking us from a forecasting standpoint was, well, how quickly could -- if you -- if the tribes and us minimize the amount of marketing to new customers, how quickly would the cash buildup to get to the 50 percent be,

- 1 participations that they had purchased from the
 - three tribes, and they were concerned through
- 3 Operation Choke Point that the government was
- 4 putting undue pressure on banks and ACH processors
- 5 not to process collections. And so what they wanted
- 6 to do was to minimize the amount of loan balance in
 - GPLS and increase the amount of cash reserve to help minimize their potential exposure.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. If necessary. If necessary.

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. No, I would view it as like any other lending situation, if you were lending in real estate and you felt that loan -- that real estate values were going to go down, you may request the owner of the real estate to put in more cash. I think what their -- their concern was definitely related to Operation Choke Point in the fact that 25 they had this large existing portfolio of

Page 232

- Q. That's what happened on August 20th, right?
 MR. SHAPIRO: Same objection. You're
- 3 misleading the witness.

A. Yeah, the -- it's not lending. I mean, what it says was as I've stated before, GPLS had the 6 right to halt buying participation interests --

7 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well, I --

A. -- from the loans originated by tribes.
 MR. SHAPIRO: Let him finish.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. I appreciate the distinction, but if GPLS doesn't buy, the tribes don't make the loans, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

15 A. No, I wouldn't necessarily agree with that. 16 There's the possibility that the tribes could originate and hold onto the loans themselves if they had the capital or if the tribes had the ability to go out to other third-party lenders besides VPC and go out to other third-party lenders besides VPC and create separate SPVs. This was just related to the GPLS.

So to say that the tribes couldn't originate -- now, on a short-term basis, that's probably a potential outcome. But long-term, that doesn't necessarily mean that the tribes couldn't originate just because VPC decided to stop. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

58 (Pages 229 to 232)

Q. No, yeah, and I appreciate the distinction. I'm not asking for what the tribes theoretically had the right to do, perhaps the ability to do with some other funding source. But from the -- I think you answered the question. From the standpoint of the system as it was currently set up, not from what -- how it might be set up in the future, if -- if GPLS is telling Think Finance no more originations --

MR. SHAPIRO: Objection. You're misstating the testimony and the document.

MR. ACKELSBERG: I'll restate -- I'll restate the question. The last thing I want to do is misstate it.

MR. SHAPIRO: Well, just look at the language of the document you showed him. I mean, that's probably the easiest way to do it. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. So at August -- in August 20th, Victory Park is providing you notice that they're going to put a halt to all participation interests, right?

A. They're saying --

MR. SHAPIRO: Object to form. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Page 235 itself, and if anybody reads it -- just read it into the record. It says what it says. We don't all need to sit here and sort of divine what Tom Welch was saying. He said it.

5 MR. ACKELSBERG: I agree with you. I 6 agree with you.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Now, there's one other aspect of the -- I'm trying to avoid some unnecessary embarrassment. So there is other -- there are other e-mails where you're letting people in the -- in the -- see if this refreshes your recollection. You're advising Jason that -- as to what you heard from Tom Welch, and Jason tells you, "But we just dropped a big direct mail from Mobiloans." Do you remember that?

A. I think it's -- what I see in this -- this document that you provided to me, and I think I summarize that in my response to Tom is --

Q. Right.

A. -- that one issue we should discuss is we're in the middle of two existing preapproved direct mail campaigns.

Q. Participation purchases.

MR. SHAPIRO: Objection; form. You're misquoting the document.

A. I think I can answer your question, but I will rephrase the question that I think Dan would find acceptable. On August 20th, what Tom was saying was we're going to send over a formal letter to you, Think Finance, to let you know that it is our intent to have GPLS halt the purchase of participations from the three tribes. Could you please -- and I know it's not worded here -- also forward that on to the tribes to let them know that we're exercising this right under our master participation agreement?

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

O. Okav. And --

MR. SHELDON: Lets give Dan a chance to object to the question formed by the witness, too

MR. SCHEFF: And the answer.

MR. SHELDON: And the answer. MR. SHAPIRO: Well, so as long as you have been kind enough, the -- I would just say that the document that everybody is referring to, the August 20, 2013, e-mail from Tom Welch, speaks for whoever, you then communicate back to Tom: We have a problem, we've already done a mail drop, direct mail on Mobiloans. This potentially -- I mean, you're basically -- a direct mail drop is effectively offering a loan to people in some -- right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. It's -- these are often preapproved loans, right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. I'll answer it exactly as I outlined in the e-mail, you know, one issue we discussed is we're in the middle of two existing preapproved -- preapproved direct mail campaigns.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Okay. And so then you get -- and then -- and then Tom is responding to that, that they might soften their restriction at least as to -- as to the preapprovals that have already gone out, they mail -- let that -- let that go, right?

A. From my perspective, in reviewing this e-mail chain, yes, what I recollect is that they softened their stance and didn't provide an immediate hard stop on purchasing the what I was asking for was documentation to support that they were now comfortable allowing a small amount of former repeat customers and the new customers that were referenced in the prior e-mail chain to be originated by the three tribes, that they would buy, you know, those -- those -- that minimal amount of participation as being originated.

- Q. Do you remember any formal communications going from Think Finance to the tribes explaining the reasons for the -- either the stoppage or the slowdown in new originations?
- A. From my perspective, there certainly would have been -- and it probably would have been between Jason Harvison and the tribes or Michelle Nguyen and the tribes, since they had the direct kind of product relationships with all three tribes.

But I would have communicated to them -- and, clearly, the tribes were aware. I mean, Operation Choke Point is at a height. I mean, it's somewhat understandable that GPLS would have concerns buying a large amount of loan participations, again, with concerns that if the government, is, in my opinion, you know, exercising undue influence and pressure on banks and ACH processors not to process transactions, you can understand why GPLS would be nervous.

As I would recollect, you know, that would expense based on volume, and I just wanted to alert them that, you know, GPLS not purchasing participations and the tribes having to eliminate their originations would certainly impact ACH volumes.

MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. You can take a break.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

- Q. So we're looking at Exhibit 263A and B, A being the cover e-mail and B the attachment. Am I right that during this time period where a wind down of GPLS is being discussed, am I right that there is at least an ask by Think Finance of Victory Park to shift some of the funding to the RISE product? Is that -- is that correct?
 - A. No, I wouldn't view it that way. I really view it two separate things are going on during this time span. One is I wouldn't necessarily call it a wind down of GPLS. I would call it kind of a require a formal letter, as this e-mail, you know, would allude to, in terms of GPLS per the master participation agreement saying that it is no longer interested or at least minimizing, and, you know, we would pass on that formal communication directly to the tribes. And if it wasn't formally passed on, it certainly was verbally passed on in the form of communication from Michelle or Jason to the tribes.

- Q. Did Michelle or Jason or anybody else associated with the tribal products ask you to get some kind of a letter from GPLS, or you just thought it would be a good idea to ask them on your own?
- A. The way I would phrase that question is, one, I mean, just my awareness of the agreement, I mean, I felt that, you know, per the master participation agreement, I'm sure -- I would have to go back and look at the specific clause, but I'm sure GPLS was required to give notice to all three tribes that they were halting or minimizing the amount of participations purchased.

And then as the top of this e-mail chain also alludes to, for us directly, I think I needed something to provide to KapCharge as the ACH processor, because I think our agreement with them, we were getting charged a certain amount of ACH downsizing or, you know, VPC GPLS's request to have more cash, less loans. And -- but I think at the same time what this e-mail chain refers to is, is that is interested in keeping their 50 million in the GPLS fund.

Separate, what this 263B refers to, it's a term sheet. Separate at this time, in the middle of 2013, we -- we decided to launch our RISE installment state-based state-licensed lending product, and it was starting to grow pretty rapidly. And so we were not going to be able to finance it out of our own existing cash flow, and so -- it's kind of a separate transaction, so I would not say that we were shifting funds from GPLS. It's a whole separate product. It could have different LPs. If VPC didn't want to provide funding for it, we could go out and find funding from somebody else.

- Q. Okay. And that's the subject of the -- of the e-mail, that topic?
- A. Well, the subject of the e-mail -- good question. What this gets into is that because GPLS is, for lack for a better term, downsizing and there aren't a lot of new loan originations -- or loan originations from the three tribes happening from an origination standpoint, I am going to assume that

61 (Pages 241 to 244)

- the credit default swap, for a short period of time,
- 2 is becoming pretty profitable. Because you've got
- 3 an existing portfolio that's generating nice APRs,
- 4 but there's not a lot of marketing expense that
- 5 we're incurring at Think Finance, and there is --
- 6 the loan losses are probably improving a little bit
- 7 because new customers typically have a higher risk
- $\,\,$ of loss than existing customers. So if you don't - have a lot new customer loan origination, creditquality improves.

quality improves.So we're gett

So we're getting credit -- you know, we're getting cash flow as a part of our credit default swap with GPLS, and at the same time, I'm communicating to GPLS, you know, it's nice that, you know, you want 50 percent cash reserve, you know, in the GPLS with your investment, but, you know, at the same time, I'm not thrilled about, you know, as part of the credit default swap arrangement that you're getting -- I don't know if it was 17, 18 -- somewhere between a 17 to 20 percent return on what

21 I affectionally joked in a verbal discussion with

Tom Welch was a money market mutual fund, you know, that -- you know, and so we're going to start to look to prepay down some of the GPLS facility because it makes no sense for our credit default and the ILP product that the company was marketing for itself under the RISE label?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. From a CFO perspective?

MR. ACKELSBERG: Well, I mean. . . MR. SCHEFF: Answer the question if vou can.

A. I'm just going to answer it from my perspective. Without getting into the -- the unit economics are certainly different between the two, to a certain extent. I think RISE, from our perspective, was a product where as the state licensed direct lender, we could offer some other, you know, unique features that Ken Rees, Jason Harvison, Michelle Nguyen and others felt was important.

You know -- well, one, first and foremost, it's just -- especially, as you can appreciate in this type of environment, regulatory diversity. Being a direct state licensed lender definitely, I think, had -- was one way of operating. And then you also had, you know, the service provider model. So it was two different ways of distributing the same. So, I mean, from that perspective, from the CSO -- CFO perspective, it gave us multiple swap to be incurring a 17 to 20 percent, you know, cost of funds associated with it.

So then what we get into is with this -- I mean -- but Tom, what he's alluding to in this e-mail, we would like to protect investment, you know, don't pay down GPLS so much that we have to return money to them and GPLS.

And I said, well, that's fine. What we'll then end up doing is we won't pay down GPLS as much, but from a corporate CFO perspective, I said what that means is, I'll probably -- I want to finalize this RISE facility, but I probably won't be borrowing as much initially because I'll use my excess cash flow. Rather than paying down GPLS, I'll use it to self-fund our RISE growth for a little bit.

So that's kind of how it all ties to -kind of together as to why we were mentioning both in the same e-mail even though they're two distinct facilities.

Q. In your mind, other than the fact that one's state licensed and one is not, what's -- from a -- from the standpoint of the CFO, what was the difference between the ILP product that was being marketed for Plain Green, for example, and the -- abilities to lend in a similar type of -- not us lend but gave us the ability with RISE to lend directly with the tribal programs, as we talked. It gave them -- you know, us the ability to participate as a service provider to them lending -- lending their products.

But there were different features. You know, RISE offered price -- price progression, you know, down to 36 percent, other, you know, other bells and whistles. But -- so there were -- there were definitely differences between the two products.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well, you don't have to pay a revenue share for RISE, right?

A. Yeah, I would argue, I mean, from a CFO perspective it would probably be more profitable. But, really, all of the products that we were involved with, whether we were the direct lender or the service provider, what we were trying to target was, roughly, you know, a 20 percent operating margin, you know, across all of the products.

In fact, you know, when you look at, you know, these relationships, you know, from a tribal lending perspective -- you know, I went back and

Looking at the audited financials, I could look at the interest expense line item and see that the interest expense, that we had to characterize the VPC guaranteed return on the GPLS facility and maybe a small amount of debt related to RISE was roughly 92 million during that three-year period, and the tribes, from what I could gather in looking at the other cost of sales and the profit share paid to them was roughly 60 million.

So it was about a 30 percent split to us, 30 percent to the tribes, and 40 percent to VPC. So it seemed reasonable that all three, as I kind of thought, were making relatively about the -- the same amount of money, or it wasn't completely disproportionate.

So I would say, you know, back to your regarding, you know, would it be more profitable for us to do it directly ourselves, yeah, but we -- you know, with the price progression and some other

10 because sometimes we have our December board meeting

11 a little bit earlier given the holidays, that we 12 had, I believe, first discussed with our board of

Q. Everything except for tribal, right?

A. Everything -- well, we would consider anything that was related to the service provider platform, which at that time was primarily -- I think it was all tribal, yes.

So I wouldn't say that it was finalized at that time. I would have to go back and look when it was done, but we were strongly considering doing it. Page 255

RISE loans with -- with them involved, and the other thing that's being discussed is the idea that this

3 facility would move to the -- to the new company if, 4 in fact, you did split?

A. I'll answer the first question first, which was, yes, what this was related to, this particular structure was related to financing the -- the RISE product that we had launched, the state-licensed installment loan product that we had launched in 2013.

The second question, I wouldn't necessarily agree with that, because irrespective of whether we did a spinoff or not, as I mentioned earlier, we would need to finance the RISE facilities. So, you know, I would say that this structure would have worked had we not done a spun off, or, in retrospect, since we did a spinoff, it worked as well. But we didn't -- they didn't set up the structure because of the spinoff. MR. ACKELSBERG: All right. Let's look at 266, now moving into January of 2014. (Exhibit No. 266 marked.)

23 A. Wow, landscaping.

24 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

O. Yeah, blame -- blame this on Katten. I

Page 254

1 We knew that in order to do it, we would certainly

2 have to get their approval. "They" being Victory

3 Park Capital. 4

Q. Why is that?

A. Well, they are the lender right now to -to us directly through the RISE facility, or about to be through the RISE facility, as well as with the GPLS. And because of the corporate guarantee and lien on our assets, I'm sure -- I'm just assuming, but I'm pretty sure that, you know, at this point you've got to get them to bless any major transaction like that.

MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. And just keeping with this topic, we'll move to 265. This is Bates TF-PA 674500.

(Exhibit No. 265 marked.)

A. Give me one minute to review this proposed structure.

(Reviews document.)

Okay.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG: 21

Q. So I take it that there's -- there's sort of -- it sounds like there's sort of two things going on here in this. One is that you and Victory

Park are still discussing a way to possibly fund

1 mean, we're getting -- the GPL documents are really 2 hard to read. So I apologize on behalf of Katten.

MR. SHAPIRO: Thank you. Is this 266? MR. ACKELSBERG: Yes. GPLP 161130.

A. (Reviews document.)

Okay.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Do you remember this e-mail?

9 A. Not -- not specifically, but after 10 rereading, I think I kind of understand why I sent 11 the e-mail.

> Q. Okay. Earlier in this discussion, I asked you if -- if GPLS -- I think I asked you if GPLS money -- we were discussing GPLS money being rerouted into RISE, and you said, no, that's not what's going on. And I guess part of my question is -- because I knew this one was -- I had seen this one. So it looks to me like that's what you're talking about. So tell me what I -- what I 19 20 misunderstood.

21 A. I think in that earlier one -- and I'm kind 22 of glad this is being chronologically because it

23 kind of makes me think of how things, you know, 24 actually happened. I think in that point in time, I

25 really viewed GPLS and RISE SPV as two separate

64 (Pages 253 to 256)

1 facilities, which they were.

1.5

At this point in time, I'm going to guess why I wrote this e-mail was -- it was kind of alluded to earlier. You know, I still -- we still probably had a large amount of cash sitting in GPLS that is reducing my credit default swap admin fee by a 17 to 20 percent rate, and I'm, like, okay, you know, we're getting -- RISE is growing. We have got this RISE facility. You know, can you be nice to us and can we just move some of that money out of GPLS into RISE at that point.

Q. Right. That was my understanding. And so --

A. Yeah. So that's why -- I apologize. Back in October, I probably wasn't thinking that way, but now here it is in January of 2014, RISE is really starting to grow, you know, the -- the tribal model is not originating as much, and there's a lot of cash in GPLS. I'm doing what any good CFO does, trying to convince my lender to divert funds from one facility where they've got excess cash into another so I can pay less interest.

MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. 267. This one actually alludes to an attachment -- makes reference to an attachment, but I don't believe the attachment

April, May time span. So that's probably why.

And we would -- regardless even with the spinoff happening, effective, like, May 1st, 2014, we would have to have corporate insurance for the new entity. I was giving the reasons to him why so that when he had the discussion with Woodruff & Sawyer, from a corporate insurance perspective, this would probably be what they would be interested in at a high level, "Gee, why are you doing this spinoff?"

Q. Now, one of the things that -- there's an aspect to the spinoff that we haven't talked about before, which you allude to in No. 1 where you say, "The tribal litigation would hold up our ability to go public."

And so the -- you told us, like, right from the beginning when you came to Think Finance, the -- the hope was to go public at some point, right?

A. I think that would have been the primary -- the primary mechanism for the investors, mainly the venture capitalists, would be an IPO.

Q. Okay. And so -- and that desire to go public, to do an IPO, that -- that desire didn't go away from 2007 all through the tribal period, right?

was produced. That's purely for Richard's benefit.

MR. SCHEFF: Thank you.

(Exhibit No. 267 marked.)

A. (Reviews document.)

Okay.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. And so is this an accurate summary of your thinking about -- about the spinoff at this point in time?

A. Well, in looking at the subject, I mean, there's -- there's multiple, you know, constituencies involved in a spinoff, and, you know, the messaging or what they would be interested in or what affects them about the spinoff could be different in lots of ways.

So in this context this e-mail is really guards towards our insurance underwriters because what it's getting at -- and Badr Qureshi was my treasurer at the time, and so he was responsible for cooperate insurance and discussing with our insurance broker, which, I believe, was Woodruff & Sawyer out of the Bay area, you know, hey, we're thinking about spinning off our entity as we go out -- and, typically, this was -- I think our corporate insurance policies typically renew in the

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. I'll answer the question. From my perspective, I believe my desire to take the company public never changed. I mean, we always operated in -- the company in a manner that we felt that an IPO would be a liquidity event for our investors. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Okay. Well, and it would be a liquidity event for the executives, too. I mean, let's be frank.

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. I could comment based on what -- never mind. Yes, it would be a liquidity event for -- for certain employees that had stock in the company. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Well, particularly, Ken, you and Jason Harvison, right?

A. Well, and any other executive that had stock options or restricted stock units as well. I mean, it was more than just Ken, Jason and I that had stock or stock options in the company.

Q. And it's true that -- that you and Ken were making sort of explorations about -- about going public during the -- in 2012, 2013?

A. I would say going all the way back to when

Q. And whether it was the ACH crisis or the New York litigation, the tribal aspect of your business was becoming problematic from the standpoint of going public; am I right?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. I'll answer the question. I'll rephrase it a different way. I really felt as we outlined in the KPMG tax opinion regarding the spinoff, that we had two distinct business lines. We had the service provider platform, which is where we provided services to the tribes, and we also had the direct lending platform where we were the direct lender under RISE. We had the UK business.

It was Operation Choke Point, from my perspective, that was really putting pressure on the entire Think Finance organization; meaning, that the undue stress of trying to get ACH providers, not just for tribal, but Operation Choke Point was really having an impact on our ability to get potentially ACH providers for our RISE product.

We lost our -- our corporate Wells Fargo were processing for tribal.

And in talking with investment bankers, because of the litigation related to the tribal model, it would be very difficult to take the company public until the litigation related to tribal eventually settled. And I don't think it took a lot of rocket science to gather that that was going to be years down the road, if ever.

And so all of those reasons were the reasons why we strongly considered and proposed to the board that we consider doing a spinoff.

12 MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. And this --13 another one in March of 2014. This is Plaintiff's 14 Exhibit 268, Bates TF-PA 108729.

(Exhibit No. 268 marked.)

16 A. I think these e-mail chains would be a lot 17 smaller if VPC didn't have, like, six lines between 18 their name, their address and. . .

19 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

20 Q. They're taking -- they're taking all the 21 blame

22 A. Sorry. 23 (Reviews document.) 24 Okay.

MR. SHELDON: I need another second.

checking account. I mean, I can't imagine any -- I can't imagine operating a business without a basic business checking account. We're not ACH processing. We're not talking anything related to any particular loan product. Wells Fargo told me, point blank, because of the Operation Choke Point and the regulators' pressure on them, to not provide any type of services to Think Finance, Inc., related to the space under the Operation Choke Point.

It got to a point where it was very difficult to do business even under the state license model because of the regulatory -- you know, the Operation Choke Point, which I would say was probably geared more towards the tribal model and some other, you know, industries, but was also having an impact on just our regular state license model.

And so that was really the main impetus for considering the spinoff is, gosh, we've got this nice business off to the side, the direct lending platform that's starting to grow, and we're having difficulty getting basic checking. We're having difficulty getting a big four auditor. We're having difficulty getting, you know, ACH processing. Or if we do, it's expensive. It's as expensive as they please.

2 Okay. Thank you. 3

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. So can you explain to me the subject with -- that's referencing the transfer of net assets, the $65 million?

MR. SCHEFF: Where are you referring to?

MR. ACKELSBERG: In the middle of the second page. So it's the --

MR. SCHEFF: Okay. Why don't you direct him to it --

MR. ACKELSBERG: Sure.

MR. SCHEFF: -- so the record is clear what you're doing.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. It's the e-mail, Chris Lutes to Tom Welch, regarding the GPLS split discussion. And you -well, I'll read it to you. "We also need to discuss the initial transaction. Looks like roughly $65 million in net assets will be dividended by" --"by Think Finance to Elevate. I had originally accounted for this as a noncash loan by TF to EL, but it's actually a reduction of TF's equity is what

Grant Thorton is saying. Makes sense since it is

66 (Pages 261 to 264)

Elevate.

technically a spinoff." Right?

So at this point in time -- I mean, and my understanding of -- of splits or spinoffs is that there are tax considerations, such -- there are tax considerations in a -- in a spinoff, right? If you could explain to us just generally what those are, that --

A. Yeah, I'm --

MR. HERMAN: I object to form. BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. I know, I'm -- look, I'm not asking for a -- I'm not asking for a tax -- I'm sorry, I'll withdraw that question. I mean, that's -- that was an inartful question.

So one of the -- the issues that's involved in creating a new company out of -- out of a parent company is -- is where the capital comes from for the new company. The new company has to start with working capital, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And because it's a spinoff, because it's, essentially, a split of an existing company, that working capital is coming from the original company, right?

A. Potentially, but not necessarily.

originally -- you know, we always were really good with -- dating back to when I first started in 2007 and having -- regardless of -- we had numerous legal entities, as you can appreciate, for state licensed lending, for the tribal models when we partnered with the bank, to really kind of easily in their general ledger segregate all of the assets, and the assets primarily related to any lending program are cash and the actual loan balances. And then we had, you know, debt facilities that were typically structured, you know, for each of those particular programs. Like I said, we had GPLS. We had the RISE debt facility.

And so when I originally kind of provided them a model, because they wanted to see a model on how the pro forma would look when we split, what I did was I said, well -- I had -- I had grossed it originally, saying that if you had ten -- I am going to just -- 10 million of cash for RISE and 75 million of loans for RISE, that we would move $85 million over to RISE and the related debt facility over to RISE and any retained earnings or, you know, capital related to those RISE legal entities over to -- I'm saying RISE. I meant

Q. Okay. But that's what -- that's the subject of your discussion here with Tom, right?

A. Not quite. And we can -- I can answer that question later. This one, I think, had more to do with the fact that from VPC's perspective, and what started this e-mail chain was, as you can appreciate, their concern. I mean, they've, you know, lent to -- you know, they have the GPLS facility that's going to stay behind in Think Finance as part of the service provider platform to the tribes, and then they have this new facility with RISE that's going to be spun off into the new entity Elevate.

When it was all combined, they felt good that they had, you know, adequate coverage collateral on both facilities because they had a lien on all of Think Finance's assets. And now they're just trying to understand when you split it, you know, does anything bad happen to them from a collateral perspective, are they somehow -- their collateral position under either entity being harmed.

And so what I was pointing out to Tom in this e-mail, originally -- and this is where it kind of gets -- the dividend and the thing was But what Grant Thorton, our auditors, came back and said, is, no, technically, what happens is you collapse all that and it's a net dividend. So the cash and the loan balances go over but not the related debt facility. It just comes out of the capital of Think Finance. So, in essence, the overall capital of Think Finance drops because it's a dividend. You're not just moving over assets and liabilities and a small amount of equity.

So I wanted to make sure Tom understood, because I think there was a covenant related to the overall equity position of Think Finance that, hey, you know, this is now a dividend, so suddenly the equity base of Think Finance will drop because it's technically dividending under the -- the accounting rules, not a grossed up transfer.

Q. When you say "dividending," we're talking about a transfer of equity from -- from the -- from Think to Elevate?

A. No, no, what we're talk--MR. HERMAN: Objection; form.
THE WITNESS: I'm sorry if I interrupted.

A. No, from my perspective, what we're talking about is, like I said, if you had 10 million of cash

67 (Pages 265 to 268)

Page 269

- 1 that was specifically in RISE legal entities as part
- 2 of Think Finance and you had 75 million of loan
- 3 balances for RISE that were in Think Finance, and
- that -- and then you had a related debt facility of 75 million, that we would move 10 million over.
- 75 million, that we would move 10 million over, 75 million over, 75 million over and then the small
- 7 amount of retained earnings. What they said was you
- 8 had to collapse everything, and it gets dividended
- out of the net equity position of Think Finance.
 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:
 - Q. Right. So that's what I'm -- so I'm --
 - A. But it all related. And maybe it's we're saying the same thing just in different manners. So I apologize.

From my perspective, what ended up being dividended over, or if it was going to be moved like I originally expected, was truly just the net assets related to the RISE legal entities that were being spun off or the net assets and related equity position of the UK that was being spun off.

- Q. But from the standpoint of your auditor -- that's who Grant Thorton is, right?
 - A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So from the auditor, what they were telling you was that, in their mind, what -- in

Page 271

- Elevate opened -- and what's that date? Is that May 1st?
 - A. May 1st, 2014.
 - Q. Okay. So May 1st, 2014, Elevate begins. And you're still the CFO of Think at that point,
 - A. CFO at Think. But for the first five months, I think, through the end of September or October, we considered it, like in most other spinoffs, shared services where, technically, I could act on behalf of both entities --
 - Q. Right.
- A. -- because it's impossible to build up a new accounting staff immediately.
 - I understand.

So when Elevate began as -- in operation as a legal entity on May 1st, 2014, how much working capital did it, in fact, begin with according to your accounting -- according to your accounting records -- go ahead. You're --

A. I was going to say, I don't recall the specific amount of capital, but that's -- from a working capital -- from capital -- or assets related to specific lending programs, which I don't consider working capital, those moved over. So if there was

- their judgment, what was happening was that 65 million of equity that's on the balance sheet of Think Finance would have to move to the balance
- Think Finance would have to move to the balance sheet of Elevate?
 - A. Because it --
 - $Q.\,\,$ "Yes" or "no," and then -- and then you can --

MR. SCHEFF: He can answer the question however he wants.

A. I will answer by expanding upon it. What they were saying was, is that there are 65 million of net equity -- net assets -- sorry, not net equity, but net assets -- related to the direct lending platform, and those needed to be dividended out of Think Finance. Those net assets, again, as I would say, would be related to cash specifically related to the RISE or the UK programs and the loan balances related to those programs. So, again, everything was done clearly just on a distinct legal entity basis. There was no -- if there was corporate cash at Think Finance, that stayed at Think Finance. It did not move over.

Q. What about -- well, first of all, let me just stay with the 65 million. When, in fact,

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

any RISE kind of cash-in-process, a collection related to funding accounts, that moved over. If there were any loan balances related to RISE, that moved over to Elevate. Same with the UK. UK, you can appreciate, that's pretty easy because it's a collapsed international legal entity that moved over

The working capital to then fund payroll, other, you know, ancillary expenses, that was the reason why we set up the Think Finance/Elevate kind of intercompany debt facility between the two entities on a somewhat temporary basis, because we realized, like any spinoff, you know, a lot of the corporate cash is held at Think Finance. It stays behind at Think Finance.

You know, Elevate is a new entity. It needs to either borrow money from somebody or raise capital from somebody. And what we agreed, and what the board of directors on both companies agreed, is that there would be an arm's length transaction and an arm's length fair value interest rate whereby Think Finance, because it was sitting on excess cash -- again, as you can appreciate, the GPLS portfolio was, you know, stagnated or winding down, so they were getting excess cash flow from the GPLS

1 credit default swap, and they decided that it made sense from a stand-alone board perspective to make a loan to -- to Elevate to help them fund their working capital. And so we put that facility in place. My understanding is that's rather common in

> What we were able to do, we did initially borrow from Think -- "we," Elevate, did initially borrow from Think Finance under that facility to fund working capital for a period of time, until, I believe, it was sometime later in 2014 or early 2015 where Elevate actually borrowed working capital from Victory Park Capital and used the proceeds to pay off Think Finance.

So by the end, I'm a hundred percent certain that by the end of 2014, whereas Think Finance had lent money to Elevate to provide them working capital on a temporary basis, Elevate had completely paid it back because either through their own other funding efforts, I think primarily from Victory Park Capital, were able to raise enough working capital to pay it off and use that to go forward.

Q. You're familiar -- well, the -- one of the assets that the old Think Finance company had was Page 275

- A. So all of those products were housed on our Legacy Platform.

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

A. My understanding at a high level, and appreciate I'm not a chief technology officer or an IT expert in any stretch of the imagination and --I'll answer it in two manners. One is really what you're getting at from your question but then also from an accounting perspective, at a high level, yes, there was a copy made because, to your point, the Legacy Platform included the original RISE -- or the original PayDay One product, so there was retained earnings that, you know, moved over to Elevate related to that since that was a direct lending product, as well as the RISE installment loan product that was a direct lender product.

 - Platform?
 - A. Yes, I do know what you're referring to.
 - Q. Okay. And as I understand it from prior testimony, that the -- that the Legacy Platform is the platform on which the original PayDay One
- 12 13 product was based. It later was the platform on
- 14 which the two tribe -- on which the first First Bank
- 15 of Delaware ThinkCash product was built, and later 16 it was the same platform on which the two tribal
- 17 installment loan products were based. And, finally,
- 18 it -- when RISE was developed at Think Finance, 19 that, too, was housed in some form on the Legacy

- or housed on those particular platforms. So what
- 2 was decided upon spinoff was, literally, at that
- 3 point in time, you kind of just made a copy of that
 - Legacy Platform and, you know, provided that -- this
- 5 is where I'm getting a little bit out of my

- 13 A. I'm sorry. From an accounting perspective, 14 I'm not sure that we considered that an asset on the 15 books of Elevate. We left all of that -- you know,
- 16 any expense or whatnot related to that would have 17 probably depreciated expense. If there was anything
- 18 left, it would have stayed on the books of Think 19 Finance. I may be wrong on that. We may have

A. I don't -- I don't recall. It wouldn't have been material to the overall books because that platform had been around so long, a lot of it would have been fully depreciated.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

O. Now, what I -- now, I want to make sure I understand what you mean by "platform." That -so as I interpreted, the description of the company's core products, the risk analytic side of that, it's that Think has developed -- that Think Finance had developed a state-of-the-art risk analytics system that relied on historical data that -- that Think had had internally as well as third-party data that it was -- that it was purchasing, and that the combination of all of that data and Think's ability to use that data and analyze that data, along with the additional data it got from third parties, was the key to the competitive edge where the -- the product that Think was most proud of. Something like that?

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form. MR. SHELDON: Let me say, there were a lot of data references in that question, and I'm lost as to what data is being discussed.

for kind of managing the day-to-day operations of the loan portfolio or making recommendations to the various third-party loan originators.

Q. And so what I'm trying to establish is that when you said that the platform was copied, that that was the agreement that it's incorporating -it's incorporating a lot of history, a lot of work by the risk people, right?

A. Well, let me -- let me recharacterize because when I first said it was copied, I was referencing more to the actual true -- when you brought up the term Legacy Loan Platform, that -- or the Legacy Platform, I interpreted that to be more of the Legacy Loan Platform, the actual loan system on which the loans are housed, not necessarily the credit decisioning aspect of all of that.

Q. Well, so did --

A. Because there's IT work related to that as well

20 Q. I understand. But when Elevate began, did 21 it just start from scratch without any benefit of 22 the historical work done by the Think risk analytics 23 people?

24 A. No, not --

MR. SCHEFF: Object to the form.

Page 278

1 MR. HERMAN: I'm also going to object to the form and say that that mischaracterizes the former testimony.

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

- Q. Okay. So we'll take it in pieces. Think Finance, before the split, had -- had risk analytic specialists working for it, right?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. Okay. And their responsibility was something called a "decision engine," among other things?

A. Let me phrase it this way. You know, the risk department has kind of numerous subdepartments and employees working in it. One would be those data scientists responsible for building the credit scores. It would have employees that were responsible to -- I think what you're kind of alluding to, this maintaining the IT work related to the credit decision engine, how do you get the scores that are developed into an IT platform that, you know, analyzes customer application data to help decide whether or not --

Q. Yes.

24 A. -- to approve a customer loan, and then 25 there were also risk employees that were responsible Page 280

Page 279

A. I'm not implying that at all. What moved over on May 1st, 2014, would have been the existing credit risk scores, decision engine related to the RISE installment loan product, related to the UK Sunny installment loan product. Any credit scores, credit information, from my perspective, IT decision engine, a lot of that may be shared. I don't know. It's getting a little bit out of my expertise in terms of how risk stored all of that data, whether it was one huge database or whether they had, you know, individual databases just for RISE and for Sunny and for the various tribal products. I don't know how they mingled or commingled all of that data.

But my understanding is, is that it was pretty much just that which was necessary and applicable to Elevate and its products definitely moved over, and stuff that wasn't, you know, stayed behind. But it could have been an exact copy of everything. That's probably a question better for Jason or Michelle or Ken Rees. I don't -- I just don't have that expertise.

23 BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

BY MR. ACKELSBERG:

Q. Okay. So now what I'm going to do is I'm going to put up on the screen that Excel sheet, which we -- we got with this production. Okay? And then you'll be able to see it and manipulate it, too. I mean, you'll be able to see it on the screen there. Okay.

Does this document look familiar? Does this look like the --

- A. Yeah, I'm familiar with this file format.
- Q. Okay. And if we go -- there's a tab for the TF balance sheet. Do you see -- that's the tab that we're on now. Do you see that?
- 17 A. Yes.
 - Q. Okay. And the way this is organized, you can see that it has actual numbers for January 2014 through May of 2014, and then -- and then you get future months that are labelled as forecasts. So there's a -- there's a difference between actual and forecast, right?
- A. Yeah, I think this would reflect the actual results through May 31st, and the forecasts would and if this was post-spinoff, it would be probably just whoever was running -- Michelle would have stayed at Think Finance post-spinoff. So it would have looked at potential marketing volumes for the tribes, potential losses based on risk. Just managers, like, Jason and Michelle. It would be -- various assumptions from parts of the business unit

- or just within the finance accounting department.

 Okay. Now, from this sheet, can you show us the spinoff retained earnings?
 - A. Can you scroll down?
- Q. I think you can, but we'll do it for you.
 - A. How do I do it? With my finger?
 - Q. I thought you had -- there's no -- oh, there's no mouse there. All right. We'll do it.

So look and confirm that you'll see what we're doing there. Right? I think we're there at the screen, I think that we're now. You can see it, right?

- A. Yes.
- Q. Okay. So what do you show for the retained earnings at Think on May -- end of May 2014?
 - A. At the end of May 2014 -- and, really, what I'll reference -- well, I'll answer your question, and then I'll reference one other line item. On -- represent the forecasted model for the Think -- in this particular case, the Think Finance balance sheet for the rest of the year, I am going to assume, on a -- this is an assumption. Might need to drill -- on a post-split basis, post-spinoff basis, but I'm not sure. I'd have to look at that.

- Q. Okay. But my question for now is simply just to confirm that the columns that have "Actual" over them, the numbers that would be in those columns represent the real transactional numbers that come from the general ledger of the company?
- A. It may not be exact in terms of, like, following Generally Accepted Accounting Principals in terms of, you know, how we would -- this model -- if you looked at the December 31st column, it might not translate exactly into the audited financials, but it would be a fair representation, yes.
- Q. Okay.
- A. And it would be populated from the general ledger.
- Q. Yes. Okay. And what are the forecast numbers?
- A. The forecast numbers would be based upon, you know, various forecasted assumptions that finance would gather in discussions with the product

Page 288

- at May 30th, 2014, May 31st, the total equity of
 - Think Finance post-spinoff would have been
- 3 $55.8 million. If you reference back up to line 69,
 - Row 69, what would have been contributed would
- 5 have -- as part of the spinoff -- and that's per
- 6 this model. I would have to go back and, you know,
- 7 verify it based upon, you know, the final audit
- because I think when we audited -- when Grant
 Thorton did a separate audit of Elevate, they wo
 - Thorton did a separate audit of Elevate, they would have audited the opening balance sheet.

But if this spreadsheet was correct, it would have showed -- tied to those audited financials, it would have showed that, roughly, 77.3 million of net assets would have been contributed from Think Finance to Elevate.

- Q. And you could check that on the Elevate side, right? I mean, so, for example -- Elevate is a public company, right? And because it's a public company, your financials are actually filed with the -- with the SEC on a periodic basis; am I right?
- A. Well, as I just said, even going back to that in my prior answer, if this model is correct -- and looking at it, I am going to assume it probably is correct -- you know, the open -- the 2014 audited financials for Elevate, which we would have been

Page 289

- 1 required to produce -- we weren't public, but we 2 would have been -- just as part of the VPC debt
- 3 facility, they require audited financials. There
- 4 would have been an audit of the opening balance
- 5 sheet by Grant Thorton, and we would have to tie
- 6 that amount back to the opening balance sheet. But
- 7 I'm assuming it would probably tie or come pretty
- 8 close. 9

- Q. Okay.
- 10 A. If this was done in -- if I can add one 11 other comment, the only potential change was, you
- 12 know, this being produced in June of 2014 was 13 clearly in advance of the ultimate audit done
- 14 sometime in -- during the first quarter of 2015.
- 15 It's quite possible that Grant Thorton could have
- 16 come up with some type of proposed audit
- 17 adjustments. Or as I mentioned earlier, this model
- 18 wasn't necessarily made to reflect the way the GAAP 19
- financials, the audited financials actually play 20
 - Q. And is there a formula attached to that -to that cell? In other words, where did -- how do
- 23 you -- how do you arrive at that number, the
- 24 $77.3 million? You're -- the year.

A. My guess, since it's -- since it's an

Page 291

- A. Which year are you looking in, and what are
- 3 Q. Well, let's say -- let's say 2013, yeah.
 - A. Okay.
- 5 Q. All right. So, now, we're now looking at a 6 tab that's called "Product P&L 2013," right?
- 7 A. Yes. But it's the -- the P&L only down 8 through EBITDA. It's not the full net income. It 9 wouldn't include interest, expense, taxes,
- 10 depreciation, some other line items that fall below EBITDA. 11
- 12 Q. Okay. But this is a way that -- but this 13 particular workbook is a way that the finance department can assess the relative profitability of 14 15 different products, right? That's one of the
- 16 functions it -- that's the whole point of this
- 17 exercise, right?
- A. Yes. 19 Q. Okay. And so -- and what you have listed
- 20 here would be the different product lines that Think 21 had in this particular year. We're looking at 2013,
- 22 right? 23 A. Yes.

25

15

22

23

24

- 24 Q. And so we have RISE. We have the
 - installment loan product. And just to be clear, ILP

- 1 actual hard copy number, you know, typed in there,
- 2 that that would have been based on the April 30th
- 3 transaction spinoff date. And as you can imagine,
- 4 given a spinoff, the accounting finance department 5
- played really, really close attention to what that 6 number was, again, subject to audit at the end of
 - But that number probably would have came from the detail of the net assets based on all the various legal entities that were transferred from Think Fiance over to the Elevate entity. So it was probably the net sum of the net assets transferred.

- Q. Now, am I -- am I correct that in this -in this spreadsheet, you also keep track of profit and loss on a product specific basis?
- 16 A. To the best that we can using assumptions, 17 but yes.
 - Q. Okay. So if you'll watch what we do here, what we're going to do is move to the product specific part of the tabs within the -- within the spreadsheet. Okay?
- 22 A. Sure.
- 23 Q. Okay.
 - A. If you want, I can probably do it.
- 25 Q. Yeah, go ahead.

Page 292

- 1 would be Plain Green and Great Plains Lending 2 together, right?
- 3 A. Yes, it would.
 - Q. LOC represents Mobiloans, correct?
 - A. Correct.
- 6 Q. And then you have UK is what you're doing
- 7 in England. RTO is rent-to-own. And then you have
- 8 two other product lines, Card and Elastic, with --
- 9 with not a lot of -- not a lot of revenue attached 10
 - to them, right?
 - A. Correct.
- 12 O. So --
- 13 A. But it also highlights, by the way, on
- 14 Row 16 the amount of profit-sharing paid to the
 - tribes in that particular year, which was
- 16 $28.7 million.
- 17 Q. Right. And, actually -- so that's a --
- 18 that's a good point. Well -- and I'll get to that
- 19 in a minute, but -- I'll take that point, but first
- 20 let me say that what this shows is that at least in
- 21 2013, RISE lost -- if we just look at the EBITDA,
 - RISE lost about $10.9 million, right?
 - A. Uh-huh (affirmative response).
 - Q. The installment loan product earned
- 25 $126 million, correct?

73 (Pages 289 to 292)

1	A. Before interest expense.	1	am going to it's not letting me drive it.
2	Q. And that's after paying the tribes a profit	2	Q. My associate is here saying you know it a
3	share of $22.3 million, right?	3	whole lot better than we do, so go ahead.
4	A. But, again, before paying GPLS their 17 to	4	A. Okay. So I'm looking at 2013. So there
5	20 percent fixed return.	5	would have been in 2013 49.1 million of interest
6	Q. Okay. And the line of credit that's	6	expense backed out of the tribal profits, and then
7	Mobiloans, that was also a money maker, not not	7	it would have been taxed at, roughly, the 40 percent
8	anywhere near as much a money maker as the	8	effective tax rate. So if I go back to the 2013
9	installment loan product, right, but still it made	9	product P&L, you would these two would have
10	27 million after paying the Tunica a profit share of	10	combined to 153 million, back out 49 million for
11	6.4 million, right?	11	simplicity can we just say, and it rounds down to
12	A. Correct.	12	Q. And you're combining now ILP and LOC?
13	Q. Okay. The UK product was a loser, right,	13	A. Yes, that's right.
14	at $24 million, right, during this year?	14	Q. Okay. So if you combine
15	A. It lost money. I wouldn't call it a loser.	15	A. A hundred million and then you tax it at 16	Q. I'm sorry, I don't	16	40 percent, after tax, it would have been probably,
17	A. I know.	17	roughly, about 60 million, and there would have been
18	Q. It lost money. As did RTO and the other	18	some depreciation expense.
19	two products, correct?	19	Q. Well okay. So, I mean, we could we

You know, on this what I have highlighted on this particular spreadsheet is the 115-million-273. This would have been, you know, from my perspective I think ties to the audited financial somehow, but it also ties back to that product 2013. Like I said, you know, all of this interest expense line item would have related to the

And you can see, again, what I highlighted earlier when I was referencing the 60 million, you can see a little bit more. But 63 million of net income through 2011 through 2013 is what Think Finance earned.

I understand your point of -- that there were, you know, other products that were in a loss position at that particular time that would have, you know, grossed up the tribal net income that we would have made during that time span, but what I had said earlier in my testimony was Think Finance ended up making, roughly, 60 million of net income --

- Q. But when you set --
- A. -- during that three-year period.
- Q. But that reference to -- just to be clear, the reference to that, roughly, 30/30/40 split, when you said that Think Finance made, essentially, the same amount of money that the tribes, you're basically looking at the total --

A. Of Think Finance. Which is what I said. I can revise that, and if you want, we can probably quickly generalize, you know, what this would have said.

1 probably be even less than the net income, that we 2 were generating most of our net income in 2011 and 3 2012 off of our Legacy payday product, not the 4 tribal products. 5

So I admit, it was kind of a gross generalization, but I'll bet it kind of balances out, because you can see in 2011 and in 2012 there was almost 40 million of interest expense. And, again, all of that would have related to GPLS and the tribal programs.

So net -- I mean, Irv, we can play with the percentages, but I'll bet I could go back and, you know, if you wanted as an additional thing for all of you, I could do a more exact calculation as to how that played out. But, whereas, 2013 we probably ended up making more off the tribal program, and 2011, 2012, was kind of a startup operation and we ended up incurring far significantly less.

And, in fact, in a couple of cases, you know, when you spin up, you end up losing money off the particular product that particular year, even though you can see Think Finance, in general, had 13.7 million of net income in 2011 and 27.1 million in 2012, and 21.9 million in 2013. And I'll bet --

Like I said, if you add up column C and D 1 2 from an EBITDA perspective, you're at 153 million. 3 Give me the liberty of just rounding down to 4 150 million for simplicity's sake. And as I showed on that other spreadsheet, the interest expense was, 5 6 roughly, 50 million. So the tribal would have made pretax in 2013, roughly, $100 million. After tax, 7 8 if it was a simplistic 40 percent tax rate, it would have made about 60 million of net income after tax in 2013.

You could probably do the same thing for 2012 where the profits -- as you can see, in fact, Mobiloans in 2012 was a loser, whereas, PayDay One -- because at the time, this would have been the Legacy payday product, not the new launch of the RISE product. You know, the -- the same where you're picking up and, pardon me for saying picking on, 2013, you know, you can use the same analogy, but it will probably lower our profits from the tribal program in 2012, or even in 2011 when we started up.

In fact, in 2011 you can see that the EBITDA for the combined two was roughly 28 million. And if you back out all of the interest expense in 2011 related to that program, I would guess it would

I don't have privy to the audited financials for 2014, but my guess is, is that you would see the tribes and GPLS making a lot more net income than the tribal operations did in 2014 just because it was in wind-down mode and having to still pay a lot of interest expense to GPLS.

MR. ACKELSBERG: Okay. Just one minute.

I have no further questions.

MR. HERMAN: Mr. Ackelsberg, I just -before we finish with this document, I would just like to state for the record that what has been shown to Mr. Lutes here is not in the form that it was produced by GPLS. There are certain sheets that were not present initially which were just not in the original, what was shown publicly to GPLS. There are sheets that were, I guess, hidden or unhidden, but they were not in what was produced by GPLS in its original form. This has been altered.

MR. ACKELSBERG: Yeah, I mean, what we'll do is we will send it on disk. I mean, you can make --

MR. HERMAN: I just pulled it from the database. I'm telling you --
